"In small proportions we just beauties see;
And in short measures life may perfect be."

* * * *

* * * *

Anybody who wants to get a word in edgewise in the House of Representatives nowadays has to interrupt Blanton.

* * * *

It is a remarkable spectacle that is presented to an amazed populace, of the Chairman of the Foreign Relations committee of the Senate joining in a move to use the appropriating power to hamstring a foreign policy of the Administration of which he is—on Tuesdays and Thursdays—theoratically a part. One wonders what "Secretary Borah" would say about this monstrous amendment to the naval bill.

* * * *

Mr. Coolidge paints George Washington as the kind of a man who could have had honorary college degrees to burn if he had lived a little later.

* * * *

The conviction of Bill Vare by the Senate several months ago is sustained by a special committee, and in accordance with the Lewis Carroll school of jurisprudence it is understood that the trial will come off next year.

* * * *

Representative Black offers a bill to provide a shack for shivering reporters who have gone news snooping around Twenty-third and S streets, but are there to be no soup kitchens and a bread line for the hungry job-hunters?

* * * *

The addition of an amendment to the naval bill cutting off financial support for the Marines necessitates a change in the title of the measure to make it read, "An Act to encourage banditry in Nicaragua."

* * * *

* * * *

Take the average Senate speech nowadays, and illustrate it, and Andy Gump would be crowded into the waste basket.

* * * *

Thanks to the holiday of the street cleaning department yesterday pedestrians were appropriately reminded of Washington crossing the Delaware.

* * * *

The unprecedented cold wave in Europe has been broken at last, the temperature in some localities soaring 'way up to the zero mark.

* * * *

The reporters who are buttonholing the guests of Mr. Hoover as they emerge from his residence do not have to rely on the charity of Congress—doubtless the syndicate that is handling the Antarctic dispatches from Commander Byrd would be glad to syndicate the stories of their pathetic sufferings.

* * * *

Ambassador Herrick undertakes to say what President Hoover will and will not do in Europe with all the assurance of a Washington correspondent selecting a new man for Secretary of Agriculture.

The Prince of Wales with deep regret will auction off his stable today. Still, this isn't the first time he has parted from his horses.

* * * *

The demand of Charles Evans Hughes for the completion of the George Washington Memorial Building in the city which bears his name recalls the disgraceful delay which attended the erection of the Washington Monument, which stood for years a half-finished reproach like the unsightly foundation for something or other in the Mall, on the site of the historic old Baltimore & Potomac depot. Here is a stirring reminder of a long-neglected obligation.

Celebrated executioner of New York, who put 140 persons to death, adds himself to his string.

Congressman Tinkham makes the belated discovery that the Kellogg treaty to abolish all wars until the next one is the greased skid on which Uncle Sam, at breathless speed, is sliding into the League of Nations—and he might have added that we're going in by way of the World Court.

DEFENSE FIRST, THEN PEACE, IS COOLIDGE'S AIM

Diplomatic Relations of Nation Lauded in Last Address Publicly.

WASHINGTON'S PLANS FULFILLED, HE AVERS

Degrees Awarded Executive and First Lady During College Exercises.

The United States is on friendly terms with every country with which it has diplomatic relations, but "we believe in a policy of national defense," President Coolidge declared in his last public address as President last night, "and maintain an Army and a Navy for that purpose."

Americans throughout the country heard the President's valedictory by virtue of an immense radio hook-up and the Washington Auditorium, where it was delivered, was well filled with a representative Washington audience.

The occasion was the midwinter convocation of George Washington University, which conferred regulation degrees on graduates of its colleges and schools and the honorary degree of Doctor of Law on both the President and Mrs. Coolidge, which act was warmly applauded in both instances.

Washington Is Eulogized.

The day being the 197th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, President Coolidge devoted a large part of his address to a eulogy of that great patriot, soldier and statesman—the Father of His Country.

The President used the remainder of his farewell address as Chief Executive to the relation of the United States and Americans to other countries and peoples when he said, "They have rarely been in a more happy condition."

"The uncertainties which have existed south of the Rio Grande have been very much relieved," the President pointed out. The domestic disorders in Central America are being adjusted with a satisfaction that is almost universal. Even the mouths of those who would rather criticize us than have us do right have been stopped."

Competent and experienced observers have assured him, the President continued, "that our relations with South America are on the most satisfactory basis that they have been for 25 years. On the far side of the Pacific our situation is equally satisfactory. We have no important unadjusted problem with the government of any European nation with the exception of Russia."

No Issues Raised.

Citizens of the United States meet the citizens of other countries in competition in the market places of the world, "but it does not raise any issue between our Government and other governments," the President said, and other countries as well as the United States maintain armies and navies, but all the great powers are committed to the principle of the limitation of armaments, and "it does not raise any issue among us."

In regard to the country's detachment, President Coolidge said it "puts us in the position where we are constantly rendering a service to the world which would not otherwise be possible. While we are not associated with any particular foreign group, in the last analysis they all know that they can apply to us when they are in need of friendly offices." Which is the position.

HATES PUBLICITY

JOHN COOLIDGE.

JOHN COOLIDGE GLAD TO YIELD SPOTLIGHT

ALAN HOOVER NOT ENVIED

Plainville, Conn., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—John Coolidge is glad that the glare of the spotlight which has surrounded him ever since his father became President of the United States is fading so that he may continue his career as a railroad man.

Sitting in the home of his fiancee, Miss Florence Trumbull, today the President's son told the United Press that he wanted to make railroading his life work and that with President Coolidge retiring from office the spotlight would now turn to Alan Hoover, son of the President-elect.

"And, as far as I'm concerned, he is welcome to it," Coolidge said, and chuckled at reminiscences of how carefully his actions while an undergraduate at Amherst had been followed.

At present Coolidge is a clerk in the statistical department of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad at New Haven, and he likes the work.

"I like it fine," he said. "My work is in the statistical department, which interests me, and I have a fine bunch of fellows to work with. Everybody has treated me fine."

"But don't you find statistical work rather dry?" he was asked.

"Not to me. I like the operating side of railroading very much. I hope to make it my life work," he replied.

Five months of work in the railroad offices have changed him considerably. He appears to have become more mature, particularly since the announcement of his engagement to Miss Trumbull, and seems to have more assurance.

Coolidge would not discuss when he would be married to the daughter of Connecticut's governor, other than to say that the wedding would be in the executive home here. Friends said the wedding probably would be in September and with as little ostentation as possible, since both Coolidge and his fiancee prefer to be out of the limelight.

He was asked concerning his father and any future plans Mr. Coolidge might have. The New England taciturnity came back.

"Let's not talk about that," was his only comment.

Girl Student Is Killed In Gymnasium Blaze

MARINES WOULD QUIT NICARAGUA BY SENATE ACT

Rider on Naval Measure, Passed, Orders Forces to Return Home.

MOVE BY DILL AIMED AT CRUISER PROGRAM

By ALBERT W. FOX.

American Marines were ordered home from Nicaragua in a last-minute rider to the naval appropriation bill which the Senate adopted yesterday by a vote of 38 to 30. As a result, the Navy bill may now be torpedoed without warning and the whole program of national defense sacrificed to party politics as a new method of patriotically celebrating Washington's birthday.

Senator Hale, in charge of the bill, will move for a separate vote in the Senate today on the Nicaraguan amendment and there is a bare chance that the damage to the proposed naval legislation may be undone. The vote yesterday was in committee of the whole and Hale reserved the right to a vote in the Senate when the Senate recessed.

The danger to the Navy bill comes from the fact that the House of Representatives will naturally kill the Nicaraguan amendment and thereby provide senators with added reasons for last minute obstruction tactics. Should the rider remain in the bill it is virtually certain that President Coolidge would veto the legislation.

Hoover May Face Problem.

Otherwise the executive branch of the Government would be surrendering its prerogatives to senatorial cliques in the conduct of the Nation's foreign affairs and the incoming Hoover administration would be confronted with an unprecedented situation.

"Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used to maintain Marines in Nicaragua or to transport Marines to and from Nicaragua except in cases of emergency arising hereafter endangering life and property, or both, of American citizens."

In the vote that followed there were many instances of inexplicable confusion, especially as many of the senators seemed to think that the Bratton amendment had made the Dill proposition harmless. It was conceded after the vote, however, that this is not the case. If the amendment is written into the law, the administration must surrender and begin calling the Marines back, irrespective of whatever the State Department policy may be or irrespective of the work necessary to insure to the Nicaraguan people the fruits of their last election.

Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the Senate, voted to call the Marines out. Henry L. Stimson, understood to be Mr. Hoover's probable choice for Secretary of State, is the man who arranged for the selection and for the maintenance of the Marines until the work incident to the election is over.

Swanson Adds Vote.

Senator Swanson, who has ably led the fight for the naval bill against all opposition, yielded to the temptation to vote against the administration's Nicaraguan policy and thereby assisted in jeopardizing the fate of the Navy bill. Senator Gerry followed suit, as did other friends of the Navy.

The roll call was as follows:

Republicans—Blaine, Borah, Brookhart, Capper, Frazier, Jones, McMaster, Norris, Pine, Thomas, of Idaho—10.

Democrats—Ashurst, Barkley, Black, Blease, Bratton, Caraway, Dill, Gerry,

PALMIST IN BURLINGTON HOTEL ANNEX, READY FOR TRIAL TODAY; SPY IS USED, BLANTON CHARGES

INFORMER'S IDENTITY IS KEPT DEEP SECRET

ADMITS HE SAW 100 ARRESTED IN 4 HOURS

Texan Says Foe Attempted to "Hamstring" Him in Inquiry Efforts.

Charges that Police Capt. Guy E. Burlingame had a spy at the Capitol were made on the floor of the House yesterday by Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), Texas. The Texan referred to the individual as Burlingame's "information man," but did not name him.

At the same time he charged that Burlingame had made a "confederate and companion" of Representative John Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin, and had used him to "hamstring" Blanton in his police investigation.

Talks to Mrs. Blalock.

Earlier in the day Blanton had talked to Mrs. Helen F. Blalock, the palmist who has accused Burlingame of threatening her life and her property. He declined to divulge what went on at their conference.

"I want to tell you a joke on the gentleman from Wisconsin," Blanton said on the floor yesterday in referring to Schafer. "Do you know why he interrupts me so much in the Burlingame matter? I will tell you.

"Burlingame used to have a man working in the Capitol until recently who reported to him daily on the actions of certain congressmen. Every turn I took he reported it to Burlingame and every turn that the gentleman from Vermont (Representative Gibson) took he reported it to Burlingame.

Was "Information Man."

"He was Burlingame's information man, and he found out that the gentleman from Wisconsin interrupted me frequently. He knew I was after him, Burlingame, and he thought it would be nice to cultivate the acquaintance of the gentleman from Wisconsin, and he sent this information man to my friend from Wisconsin and got him to go down on a raid with Burlingame one night. Had him go down and see him raid a joint.

"He showed him how he cuffed them around and showed him he was the big cheese, and he had the big chief from Wisconsin there watching him."

Schafer interrupted Blanton to say that he had only met Burlingame twice.

"Did not the gentleman go on a raid with him?" inquired Blanton.

"There was one time that I went down to make a personal investigation of the Second Precinct," said Schafer.

100 Arrests One Night.

"I saw Burlingame that evening in four hours make 100-odd arrests," said Schafer. "I did not see him punch any negroes, though."

"And, presto, change," cried Blanton amid laughter, "he made a confederate and companion of our friend from Wisconsin and uses him here in the House to try and hamstring me when I am here trying to bring about better conditions in your Nation's Capital."

"I will say," interjected Schafer, "that Mr. Burlingame has never asked me to say a word in the House and has never contacted with me on any of the matters which the gentleman is bringing out."

"Certainly," retorted Blanton, "he does not have to do it. He takes the gentleman on a raid and has him here to represent him when these questions come up."

Debate Suddenly Ended.

At this point the debate degenerated into a political quarrel, Blanton chiding Schafer, a wet, for having supported Herbert Hoover in the last campaign.

"I will say this to my friend from Wisconsin," concluded Blanton, "'with all his faults I love him still.' If he will come down to my district in Texas I will ask every bootlegger there to give him everything to drink there is in my district, and there is plenty of it."

Schafer said he did not drink and therefore could not accept Blanton's hospitality.

Canyon Yields Body Of Drowned Naturalist

Grand Canyon, Ariz., Feb. 22 (A.P.). The body of Glen Sturdevant, 30, naturalist of the Grand Canyon Park, was found in the Colorado River tonight by a searching party. The body was recovered a few miles below the spot where the boat Sturdevant, Fred Johnson and James B. Brooks were traveling in, capsized early Wednesday, searchers reported to park officials tonight.

The body of Johnson, the second missing man, has not been recovered.

Bride Opposes Delay In Burlingame Trial

W. W. BRIDE.

Police Capt. Guy E. Burlingame, suspended commander of the Second Precinct, will go on trial before a special trial board at 10 o'clock this morning on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and prejudicial to the good order and discipline of the Police Department.

The captain is accused of writing love letters to Mrs. Helen F. Blalock, Seventh street palmist and his former friend, who precipitated the situation in which the police captain now finds himself when she complained about him to Representative Gibson, chairman of the House District subcommittee, two months ago.

Mrs. Blalock, for whom a Nation-wide hunt was ended Thursday night when she arrived here from Chicago accompanied by agents of the Department of Justice, will take the witness stand at the trial to tell in person the story she previously has told in her statement to Gibson and an affidavit she made in Abilene, Tex., after a conference with Representative Blanton, of Texas, enemy of Burlingame.

A last minute effort was made last night to bring about a postponement of the trial today so that defense attorneys may have greater time to study the case, talk to witnesses and prepare their defense.

The proposal was advanced by William E. Leahy and Henry F. Woodard, Burlingame's attorneys, at a conference with William W. Bride, corporation counsel, and Walter L. Fowler, assistant corporation counsel, in Bride's office in the District Building late yesterday afternoon.

The conference lasted until 6:30 o'clock and was continued spasmodically later in the evening by telephone between Bride and Leahy and United States District Attorney Leo A. Rover and Assistant United States District Attorney William H. Collins, to whom Rover has given the task of presenting the criminal aspects of the woman's charges against Burlingame to the grand jury.

No agreement was reached, however, and although the request may be made

Mrs. Blalock Is to Leave City Again When Her Ordeal Ends.

JUSTICE MEN GUARD ALL HER MOVEMENTS

COLLINS MAPS PLANS FOR ACTION BY JURY

Hearing Expected to Take Place Monday; Graver Charges Rumored.

Mrs. Helen F. Blalock, Seventh street palmist and woman of mystery in the Burlingame case, passed yesterday in the Burlington Hotel and the Burlington Hotel Annex as secure from the prying eyes and questions of the public as though she were in the nether end of the earth.

Her hiding place was known to not more than a dozen persons, and they were those who had official dealings with her and those who made it their business to see that others did not discover her quarters.

When, however, she makes her public appearance today, she will be guarded by a squad of agents of the Department of Justice, greater in number than that used in the protection of the President of the United States.

In Fear of Her Life.

Mrs. Blalock, in fear of her life, went into hiding on a top floor of the Burlington Hotel after she was virtually smuggled into Washington late Thursday, following her trip here from Chicago where she was located after a month's search by the Department of Justice.

During her stay in Washington she has been under the constant protection of agents of the Department of Justice, who had assured her of protection from those whom she fears might take her life.

Mrs. Blalock's hiding place nearly was discovered on several occasions by the more than a score of newspaper reporters and camera men who "dogged the heels" of those with whom she conferred yesterday morning.

Late yesterday afternoon, her protectors decided to change her hide-out, so she was transferred to the annex of the Burlington Hotel.

Woman Talks Readily.

The palmist, who came into Washington Thursday night virtually in disguise and in a highly nervous condition, had recovered her composure to a large degree after a restful night and talked readily and forcibly to those with whom she conferred yesterday.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, who looked after Mrs. Blalock's interests during the entire time she was in flight in various parts of the country, and W. W. Bride, corporation counsel and prosecutor of Burlingame, were her first visitors.

Mrs. Blalock asked that Blanton be summoned to her rooms as soon as she awakened yesterday.

Following her talk with Blanton and Bride, Mrs. Blalock was seen by Assistant United States Attorney William H. Collins, who was on his way to Chicago with a Federal subpena ordering her to appear before the Federal grand jury here, when she decided to return here voluntarily.

Collins, who is in charge of the Federal investigation of the Burlingame case, was met at Union Station at 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning by a large number of reporters and camera men who believed that by tracking him they could discover the whereabouts of Mrs. Blalock.

Collins' first stop was at the offices of the local bureau of the Department

300 CHINESE KILLED IN FIGHT FOR CHEFOO

FOREIGNERS ARE SAFE

Chefoo, China, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The Shantung Peninsula has been the scene of heavy fighting for the past two days between loyal Nationalist troops and a large force of former northern soldiers under command of Marshal Chang Tsung-Chang, one-time military governor of Shantung.

Thus far the Nationalists, although greatly outnumbered, have been victorious because of superior arms and better organization, but they are seeking reinforcements which at present are not in sight.

The fighting between the two armies began at daylight on February 21. Although both the foreign and Chinese communities are uneasy, outward calm prevails. The foreigners as a precautionary measure, however, are developing plans for concentration and evacuation in the event of disorders should the city be captured and looted. There are three Japanese destroyers and one British gunboat off Chefoo while the

2 AMERICANS KILLED BY MEXICAN BANDITS

Bodies of Mining Engineers Found by Troop; Had Been Kidnaped.

SOLDIERS SEEK SLAYERS

Mexico City, Feb. 23 (Saturday) (A.P.).—Dispatches to Excelsior from Guanajuato, capital of the state of that name, say that the bodies of J. M. Underwood and C. C. Aisthrope, Americans, were found by troops and taken to that city.

The two American mining engineers had been captured by bandits and were held for ransom under threat of death.

Underwood and Aisthrope were said to be officials of the Guanajuato Reduction & Mines Co., whose home office is in Columbus, Ohio. The United States Embassy and Consulate General here were seeking confirmation of the newspaper report tonight.

The Excelsior account said that troops were in pursuit of kidnapers. The bandits, guided by a former employe, were said to have crept into the mining camp on Wednesday night while every one was asleep. They took Underwood and Aisthrope from their quarters and forced them to mount

Rich Man, Missing 15 Years, Murdered, Woman Admits

Francis Lewis Clarke, Spokane Millionaire, Killed by Five Men and Thrown Into Sea, Is Story Told Los Angeles Police, Who Hold Witness.

Los Angeles, Calif., Feb. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The mysterious disappearance fifteen years ago of Francis Lewis Clarke, Spokane multimillionaire, may at last be solved through the story of Mrs. Margaret Kelly, alias, Miss Marie Allen, who voluntarily appeared at city hall today to tell a story she says was prompted by pangs of conscience.

According to her story, Clarke was murdered and thrown into the Pacific Ocean near Santa Barbara on January 17, 1914, by five men. Robbery was the motive of the crime.

The disappearance of Clarke, reputed to be worth $50,000,000 was an international mystery in 1914. With his wife, Clarke was a guest at the Potter Hotel in Santa Barbara. On the night of January 14, he put his wife aboard a train bound for their home in Spokane. Next he dismissed for the day his chauffeur, Walter Shute, an old and trusted employe.

After waiting several days and hearing nothing from Clarke, Shute summoned police and a search was begun. Mrs. Clarke returned from Spokane and an intensive search was carried out without avail.

No clews were found to the millionaire's disappearance until Miss Allen approached the police.

According to the story, Miss Allen was known as "Clarice the Blonde." She and the multi-millionaire were brought together by a bellboy in a Los Angeles Hotel and journeyed to Santa Barbara together.

Clarke gave her $100 and sent her to the Potter Hotel, saying he would come up later, she said. She told five men "with whom she was acquainted," of the millionaire's presence. After waiting fruitlessly for Clarke to arrive at the hotel, she returned to Los Angeles. About a year later she encountered the quintet in San Francisco and was handed $800.

"Marie, here's your cut of the money on Clarke," said the spokesman.

"Why—did you get that money off Clarke?" she asked.

"Don't be a poor fish," was the knowing reply.

Later, she said, another of the gang told her Clarke had been "robbed and thrown over a rock," supposedly into the sea.

Men called "Alexander" and "Byron" were named in Miss Allen's statement

Marriage to Affect Lindbergh's Flying

Colonel Admits Change Is Certain, but Declines to Elaborate.

Wichita, Kans., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The Wichita Beacon, in a copyrighted story, today said that Col. Charles Lindbergh, who arrived here this afternoon from Kansas City on an inspection tour of the route of Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., answered two questions regarding his engagement to Miss Anne Morrow, for the first time since the bethrothal was announced.

Lindbergh answered in the affirmative when asked if he thought his marriage would affect his flying. He declined to elaborate on the simple, "Yes."

"Where are you going to live," he was asked.

"St. Louis is my home," Col. Lindbergh replied.

Executioner of 140 Found Dead, Victim of Own Hand

John W. Hulbert, Who Electrocuted Men in Three States for Twelve Years, Uses Pistol to End Life; Lived in Fear of Revenge.

Auburn, N. Y., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—John W. Hulbert, the executioner who put 140 persons to death in three States, committed suicide today about two years after he resigned from his grewsome position because he was "tired of killing people."

Hulbert was executioner for New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts for twelve years up until 1926. This afternoon his body was found lying in the basement of his home with two bullet holes in vital points. A .32 caliber pistol lay nearby.

Dr. William A. Walsh, the coroner's physician, held an autopsy tonight and announced that Hulbert — known around Sing Sing as 'the man who walked alone"—had killed himself.

His body was discovered by a son, Clarence, lying near a furnace in the darkened basement of the quiet Hulbert home here. Officials immediately took charge of the investigation and said no details would be given out until the preliminary investigation had been complete. He had been in poor physical condition since he resigned as executioner two years ago and is said to have worried considerably, especially since his wife died.

Hulbert was chief executioner for the three States from 1914 until he resigned on January 16, 1926. He gave no explanation of his resignation, but once later to a friend explained he had "grown tired of killing people," and that his nerves were no longer good.

Fate had played an important part in the rather grewsome life of this man. He had been chief electrician at the State prison and in 1914 Edward P. Davis, the first New York State executioner under the electric chair system, resigned because the prison board would not increase his pay of $50 an execution.

Hulbert knew the details, and as chief electrician he knew all about the circuits supplying current to the death chair. He was offered the position and accepted it at the fee of $50 a killing. In his time he watched this fee increase until it reached $150. Once he applied for more than this, but the request was denied by Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing Prison.

He is said to have made more than $15,000 in his executions.

The first execution at which Hulbert officiated was that of Police Lieut.

He knew that he must lose them before he could confer with Mrs. Blalock, so devised a ruse with the local agents.

As soon as Collins emerged from the conference with local agents, the reporters and camera men jumped into waiting automobiles. As Collins drove off he was followed by nearly a dozen machines. He drove at a moderately fast pace that took him all over the western part of the city, and then turned east at Wisconsin avenue and Q street northwest.

Collins stepped on the gas at this point and the reporters and photographers pursued him to the Savoy Apartments at 2804 Fourteenth street northwest. As Collins drove up to the curb the fleet of pursuing cars emptied their eager occupants as Collins disappeared in the apartment house.

Before he could be seen, Collins ran down to the cellar and out the back way, where Thomas Cullen, chief of the local agents, and another operative, were waiting with an automobile.

Lying down on the floor of the machine until it had reached Sixteenth and R streets, Collins got up, straightened himself out and rode leisurely to Mrs. Blalock's hiding place, leaving in his wake a group of excited, speculating and disgusted newspaper men.

Has Long Conference With Her.

The assistant United States Attorney had a long conference with the mystery woman, and then summoned her to appear before the Federal grand jury Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Blalock's appearance today is in marked contrast to that three days ago when she was a hunted woman. She realized that further flight from the agents of the Department of Justice, who had hunted her day and night under the personal supervision of J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, for more than a month, was futile and decided to return to Washington and face today's ordeal.

The psalmist, following her appearance before the Federal grand jury Monday morning, will be free to go where and when she pleases. Mrs. Blalock's belief that her life is in danger precludes the possibility that she will remain here, and she had indicated a desire to be safely escorted back to Chicago, where she has relatives.

During her stay here Mrs. Blalock will get the full protection of the local operatives of the Department of Justice and as soon as she completes her testimony before the police trial board today she will be whisked away to another hiding place.

CHAMBERLAIN HINTS NEW PROFFER TO U.S.

Confident That Proposals Will Place Friendship on a World-Wide Basis.

DIFFERENCES NOT VITAL

Torquay, England, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, in addressing a political meeting here tonight said he was confident it would be "within our power to make proposals to the United States which will place our friendship on a firm footing."

He did not mention the armaments question by name but it was obvious that he had it in mind in discussing the relations between the two countries. After remarking that the laws and language of the two countries had common roots, he said, "we recently have had some discussion with the United States in which we have not yet been able to reach an agreement.

"We have had such discussion not infrequently with other powers and not infrequently with the same result. Yet nobody becomes alarmed and thinks it an unusual thing if a common solution of a difficult problem can not be reached. The measure of attention which has been given to whatever differences have existed between the United States and ourselves is not really the intrinsic value of the questions at stake but it is a measure of the desire we have for friendship with the nation which is most akin to our own.

"I am confident that it will be in our power to make proposals to the United States which will place our friendship on that firm footing which is not only to our interests but I believe to the interests of the world at large."

On several recent occasions it has been said that the British government is studying and taking up with the dominions the questions of restriction of armaments. The next moves in the situation has been expected from Britain, which has not replied to the last American note.

Toll-Bridge Fight Renewed in House

New York Representative Says Isuing Permits Offers Monopoly.

(Associated Press.)

The long standing controversy over toll bridges broke out anew in the House yesterday with Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, describing such structures as a modern means of "highway robbery."

Replying to a speech by Representative Denison (Republican), Illinois, who explained the policy of the House commerce committee regarding bridge measures, the New Yorker said, the issuance of permits for the construction of toll bridges on national highways constitutes a monopoly.

Denison denied the committee gave any person a monopoly, saying permits were freely issued to all comers and that the committee did not hesitate to permit the building of another bridge near a toll crossing. Investors in toll bridges did so at their own peril, Denison said, because the bridge might at any time be put out of business by a competitor.

Deal Opposes Virginia Sharing in Storm Fund

(Associated Press.)

A protest against the inclusion of his State in the recent bill to authorize $6,000,000 to farmers in the storm-stricken area of the Southwest was made in the House yesterday by Representative Deal (Democrat), Virginia.

Deal said he knew of no storms that had occurred in his State and that the newspapers were filled with items telling of the prosperity which Virginia had enjoyed in the last several years. He said that he doubted the constitutionality of the legislation.

Committee Votes Down Inquiry in Bank Board

(Associated Press.)

A congressional inquiry into the Federal Reserve Board's reasons for issuing its recent warning for the curbing of speculative Reserve Bank loans was blocked yesterday by the House banking committee with the disapproval of the Black resolution demanding the information.

The resolution proposed that the President, the Secretary of the Treasury and the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board inform the House about the reasons and whether the visit of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, had anything to do with the issuance of the warning.

Posse Hunts Kidnaper And Boy Out in Desert

Searchlight, Nev., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—A clew, which it was thought may lead to the solution of the strange disappearance from Los Angeles nearly two months ago of 11-year-old Richard Grant, and his alleged abductor, Henry Palmer, sent a posse of 100 men out on a desert trail near here today.

The posse's hunt was based upon information gained from James Samuelson, who told authorities that he met a man and a boy tramping across the desert near Quail Springs, Nev., late yesterday. Samuelson said that the man threatened him with a gun after he had attempted to strike up a conversation.

Ruth Elder and Art Goebel Are Struck Down by Plane

Three Others Hurt When Craft Arises While Notables Pose.

Glendale, Calif., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Ruth Elder and Art Goebel, famous ocean fliers, and several other notables escaped serious injury late today when they were knocked to the ground by an airplane while posing for pictures at the dedication of the $3,000,000 Grand Central Airport here.

Priscilla Dean, screen star; Mayor George Cryer, of Los Angeles; W. B. Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford air project; his daughter, Olive Peggy Hamilton, fashion editor of a Los Angeles newspaper, and Miss Virginia Sullivan, also were struck down by the tail of the plane.

Of the eight three were hurt slightly. Miss Mayo suffered a sprained ankle, and Miss Sullivan and Miss Hamilton were cut and bruised.

The craft was piloted by D. W. Tomlinson, formerly of the Navy's "Three Sea Hawks" of the air.

Unaware that the group was standing at the side of the big Ford cabin plane near the rear, Tomlinson started to take off. As he swerved slightly the tail of the plane swung around and struck the picture makers.

Twenty thousand persons saw the eight knocked down. The Grand Central Airport, dedicated by Gov. C. C. Young today, will serve as the terminal of the Maddux, Pickwick and Transcontinental Air Lines.

Many famous persons, including such screen luminaries as Wallace Beery, Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon nad Dorothy Janis, came here for the dedication. Sixty passenger planes brought visitors from various parts of southern California.

Miss Hamilton and Miss Sullivan, the latter Tomlinson's fiancee, were badly shaken up and it was thought at first they might have been injured seriously.

Mayor Cryer's glasses were broken as he struck the ground, but he was not hurt.

The plane carrying Mayor Cryer and his party was the first of the 60 planes to arrive. They landed at 1-minute intervals.

The ship taxied to a position in front of the grandstand and the passengers alighted. They lined up against the fuselage for pictures and were standing there when the plane made its sudden start.

Tomlinson said that he had received a signal from a policeman to move his plane to allow others to land and that he did not know photographers had intercepted his passengers. When he became aware of the accident Tomlinson leaped to the ground and rushed to Miss Sullivan's side.

KIDNAPED GIRL BACK; MAN AND WIFE HELD

Mint Employe Also Accused of Stealing Doris Murphy at San Francisco.

CHILD'S EYEBROWS CUT

San Francisco, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Charges of kidnaping were filed late tonight against Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharp and John A. Williams, employe of the United States Mint here, in connection with the disappearance last Friday of Doris Virginia Smith-Murphy. The child was restored to her parents by the Sharps this afternoon.

With her long eyebrows cut short and her clothing changed so as to greatly alter her appearance, Doris was restored to her parents today, just a week after her disappearance from a playground here. An intensive search had been conducted for the child.

She had been in custody of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharp, of San Francisco, who told police they had received her in belief she was Mrs. Sharp's daughter Betty, born out of wedlock, and recently in custody of Mrs. Sharp's relatives in Los Angeles.

Police doubted the couple's story and took the Sharps to headquarters for questioning. Questioned separately, the couple, police said, became entangled and admitted some of their story was fabricated.

Woman Changes Story.

Mrs. Sharp at first told police she had been summoned to Vallejo, across the bay from here, by a note saying her small daughter Betty, whose custody she had asked from relatives, would be restored to her there. She said she met at Vallejo "a dark man with a small mustache," who turned Doris over to here as her daughter. She said she believed the girl her own child, whom she had not seen for more than a year.

Mrs. Sharp identified John A. Williams, employe of the mint here, who has been under arrest as a suspect, as the man who gave her the little girl, but under questioning repudiated the identification and said she had received the child at the ferry building here instead of at Vallejo. Police continued the grilling tonight, hoping to obtain eventually all the facts of the kidnaping.

Mother of Girl Quizzed.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Murphy, mother and stepfather of Doris, later were taken to the police station and held for questioning.

Although the woman said she kept Doris for seven days, during which every newspaper in the city carried screaming headlines dealing with the abduction, she protested she had no suspicion that the child was not her own.

Police offered a statement by H. J. Rome, used automobile dealer, as refutation of Mrs. Sharp's story. He said that while visiting the Sharps' dwelling on business last Tuesday, the fourth day of the kidnaping search, he heard a child crying in the next room. When he asked Mrs. Sharp why the girl was crying for her mother, the woman said the child belonged to a neighbor, Rowe asserted.

MURDER CASE JURY IS UNABLE TO AGREE

TALESMEN SIT 40 DAYS

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Walter Liggett, young grain dealer on trial for several weeks for murder, this afternoon heard a jury that had been out 23 hours report a mistrial of his case, learned a few moments later that the State had not ended its efforts to send him to the electric chair, and then was informed that a husband had named him as corespondent in a divorce cross-bill.

Liggett was indicted for murder after he shot and killed Turney Cunningham, Nashville hotel manager, last October in the aftermath of a dispute over Cunningham's wife. He and Mrs. Cunningham at the trial both testified they had been intimate for six years.

The jury reported at 2:38 p. m. that agreement seemed impossible. Judge Chester K. Hart discharged the jury, and the Davidson County attorney general immediately entered a motion to reset the case. Judge Hart indicated the motion would be heard tomorrow.

As the trial neared its end, a process server handed papers in a cross-bill filed by a husband who was sued for divorce three days ago. The cross-bill cited Liggett as corespondent and he was served as he left the courtroom. The wife involved is a Government typist and her supervisor said she would remain on Government property probably indefinitely to block attempts to serve the papers.

Until the papers are served the names are not privileged for publication in Tennessee.

Liggett's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Liggett, sat with him at the defense attorneys' table when the court announced the jury was ready to report.

The defendant leaned forward, head upon his hands. He saw the jury foreman, J. B. Luster, wheeled out in an invalid's chair. Luster, who is 72 years old, has been ill during the latter days of the trial and has been attended constantly by a trained nurse.

In a quavering voice Luster announced that no agreement could be reached. Liggett, although gazing into the foreman's face, seemed to be without emotion. He turned to his father and they talked a moment while the judge discharged the jury. The jury had sat in the box just 40 days.

One report, obtained from a juror, was that eight stood for acquittal, one for conviction for manslaughter and three for a first-degree murder verdict, which would have meant a death sentence.

4-Hour Quake Recorded 2,800 Miles to North

(Associated Press.)

A sharp earthquake of four hours' duration, believed to have occurred 2,800 miles north of Washington, was recorded late yesterday on the seismograph of Georgetown University. The shocks started at 3:49 p. m., reached a maximum at 4:01 p. m. and continued until nearly 8 p. m.

New York, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Officials of Fordham University, whose seismograph recorded severe earth tremors late this afternoon, estimated the disturbance was 2,580 miles away and northwest, probably in northwest Canada, Alaska or somewhere off the coast. The sharpest quakes, they said, were recorded at 3:49, 4:08 and 5:45.

Swanson Bill Provides Battlefields' Survey

CHICAGO ASSASSINS' AUTO IS DISCOVERED

SIX ARRESTS ARE MADE

Chicago, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Police late today announced that the identity of the owner of the car believed to have been used by the gang assassins had been established and that a squad of detectives had been dispatched to arrest him.

Almost simultaneously, the North Avenue Hospital notified the police that a man, apparently an Italian, applied for treatment for burns there shortly after the automobile was found in a blazing garage last night. The man left before being treated, but hospital authorities had a good description of him. It is the police theory that he was one of those engaged in destroying the automobile and was accidentally burned when the garage caught fire.

Police also announced that they had been trying to trace a telephone call reported to have been made to "Scarface Al" Capone, Chicago gang leader, at Miami, Fla., a few minutes after the shooting but said no record had been found of any such call as yet, although telephone company records still were being scrutinized.

Half Dozen Arrests Made.

Half a dozen arrests were made after the car was found, but they were mostly of witnesses through whom the police hope to gain information of the men who had access to the garage in which the automobile was discovered last night by firemen answering an alarm.

From a grocer, the owner of the garage which is on his property, the police learned it was rented two days before the gang slayings by a man who said he was Mr. Rogers and paid a month's rent in advance. Going to the address the grocer said had been given by the man known as Rogers, the police found it deserted, but recalled that a machine gun had been seized there recently. Across the street, at the Circus Cafe, hangout of gangsters, police arrested two men and from names in their pockets rounded up three other men and two women.

In the garage was the partly destroyed automobile, the siren, a pistol and odds and ends that usually accumulate in such places. Among the finds were a man's hat, an old coat, a torn slip of paper saying "your rent is due, please pay;" parts of acetylene torches, with which the car was being dismantled; a woman's black suede pump, purchased in Hammond, Ind.; several white tablets, which were to be analyzed, and several other articles to which no importance was attached.

Hastened to Destroy Car.

Police believe a hasty effort was being made to destroy the car after the police commissioner yesterday instructed his force to inspect all garages and other outbuildings for liquor law violations, and that the garage was set afire accidentally while inflammable parts of the automobile were being burned.

John Stege, deputy commissioner of police, said the authorities had "twelve witnesses," his newspaper interrogators presuming he meant persons who could identify those seen about the garage. Due to the fact that the home of Pasqualino Lolordo, slain head of a Sicilian society, is near the garage, the police were investigating more thoroughly the theory that the killings may have been in reprisal for his slaying and the killing on a downtown street corner of Tony Lombardo, whom Lolordo succeeded as head of the Unione Siciliano.

Indiana Towns Investigated.

Indiana towns, including Hammond and Whiting, were also the scenes of inquiries as the result of the finding of the woman's slipper bearing the name of a Hammond store and a box of matches purchased in Whiting.

In accordance with the order of Police Commissioner Russell to search the city from end to end for liquor law violators—an order issued as a result of the slayings—the South Side police today uncovered an alcohol recooking plant, a brewery and an alcohol cache. Commissioner Russell said he had made a personal survey of the city last night and declared that prohibition was being enforced here for the first time in history.

Maccabees' Leader Hits Local Lodges

Weak Link in Fraternal Systems, D. P. Markey Asserts in Speech.

Chicago, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Rehabilitation of the local lodge is the chief problem facing American fraternal organizations, D. P. Markey, supreme commander of the Maccabees, told the National Fraternal Congress of America here today.

"The local lodge is the weak link in the fraternal system," he declared. "Conditions have reached a point where an individual can become a member of a fraternal society without ever seeking the inside of a lodge room. The local lodge has sunk to the status of a collection agency."

Mr. Markey denied that fraternal insurance organizations trespass upon the field of commercial insurance. The chief aim of fraternal organiaztions, he said, is home protection. He declared that fraternal societies, with their monthly dues and premiums, inaugurated the system which is now known as the installment plan, and which has extended to nearly all daily purchases of the family with the exception of dry goods, meats and groceries. Dr. D. W. Harrison, medical examiner of the Royal League, told the congress that a man's best years should be those between 60 and 100.

Grant's War Secretary, Rev. H. C. Searles, Dead

Canandaigua, N. Y., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The Rev. H. Clay Searles, 84, war-time secretary to Gen. Grant, organizer of the first railroad Y. M. C. A. and for years an evangelist, died today. He was serving in Scott's Ninth Cavalry when Grant's secretary was killed, and while filling that capacity wrote Grant's message: "We will fight it out on these lines if it takes all summer."

After the war he entered the shoe business at Catskill. He became interested in the Y. M. C. A. and at the suggestion of Chauncey M. Depew and Cornelius Vanderbilt opened the first railroad branch in the Grand Central Station, New York. He became associated with Moody and Sankey, evangelists, and later formed a team with Bronk. He held a number of pastorates, retiring in 1918.

Ice-Breakers to Help Ships.

HOOVER STILL SEEKS FARMER FOR CABINET

Relief Program All Ready, but He Lacks Secretary to Put It in Force.

SOME OTHER VACANCIES

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

With his farm relief program believed to be all worked out, President-elect Hoover is having a hard time finding some one to administer it it was indicated yesterday. Appearances indicate that he has devoted most of his time to the agricultural post in his Cabinet for the past two days.

Callers primarily concerned with agriculture were predominant on his list yesterday, just as they were the day before. Observers have reached the conclusion that a refusal by some one on whom Mr. Hoover had depended for this post has disrupted his plans, and that since his great reservoir of personal friends and acquaintances affords no second choice, the President-elect is trying to pick some one from the list of names submitted to him by members of Congress, the farming interests and from other sources.

The question naturally arises as to why Secretary Jardine was not retained. This man, who had been considering private offers for some time, though, eliminated himself without waiting to see how the Cabinet selection turned out.

Campbell Considered, Belief.

Louis J. Taber, head of the National Grange; Senator Nye, of North Dakota, and Cleveland Newton, of Missouri, general counsel for the Mississippi Valley Association, were the agricultural callers yesterday. Callers also included Senator Burton, of Ohio; Representative Porter, of Pennsylvania chairman of the House foreign affairs committee; Ralph Williams, vice chairman of the Republican national committee, and Dr. E. B. Clements, national committeeman from Missouri.

The name of Thomas D. Campbell, big Montana wheat farmer, bobs up constantly as a likelihood for Secretary of Agriculture. But if Campbell is being seriously considered for the post, the indications are that it is a great surprise to him. He has just returned to this country from a study of farming conditions in Europe. It is understood that he will be here in a few days and it is entirely likely that he will see Mr. Hoover.

Upon his arrival in New York, however, he denied the reports that he had been to Russia at Mr. Hoover's instance. His engaging frankness rather gave credence, too, to his statement that if he was under cabinet consideration he knew nothing of it.

When Newton was in Congress he represented an agricultural district of Missouri. Now his main concern is the Mississippi River barge line as well as matters bearing on the farm industry generally. He would not be a misfit in either the post of Secretary of Agriculture or that of Secretary of War, which is understood to be another unfilled post.

Brown Unusually Cheerful.

Importance attached to Burton's visit to the S street house. He was called by Mr. Hoover. There was speculation as to whether it had to do with the Cabinet aspirations of Walter Brown, of Ohio. Brown is so cheerful these days that quite a few observers are reporting that he has definitely clinched the postmaster generalship. In fact, there are reports that he is hanging around in Postmaster Gen. New's shadow to catch onto the work.

If he does land the job it will mean that Mr. Hoover finally succumbed to the entreaties of organization forces. Brown is of the hard political school, and nine times out of ten would be identified with that school to anyone seeking information on him.

Mr. Hoover has been represented as not feeling that he owed any political obligations, and none of the appointments that he is so far known to have determined upon bear the political imprimatur. It might be, though, that he has decided to put one outstanding politically-minded man in the Cabinet in order that those who make politics their careers will still have something high to shoot at.

The Postmaster Generalship is, of course, the political post of the Cabinet. The organization politicians would like to get at least two places. Yet there are indications that former Representative Good, of Iowa, Western campaign manager, is not letting any grass grow under his feet these days. He is in and out of the Capitol corridors talking with senators and members of the House.

Has Session With Dentist.

Such activity fits in with his law firm, which has offices both here and in Chicago, and he has been represented as not being interested in any Cabinet place, but there is some reason to believe that his recent conversations with members of Congress do not concern his law practice, and, of course, his law firm's prestige would be enhanced by having a member in the Cabinet.

The name of Federal Judge Ira K. Letts, of Providence, R. I., bobbed up in connection with Mr. Hoover's search for an Attorney General. If the judge has been active in Rhode Island politics, however, it is quite likely that he is a wet.

There was one period of the day, incidentally, that Mr. Hoover did not devote to Cabinet consideration, the agricultural problem or any other matter of state. It was the session he had with the dentist.

Storm Separates 6 Men From Fleet Feared Lost

Portland, Me., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Six Portland men became separated from their fishing schooners while hauling trawls in dories when the blinding northeast snowstorm struck the craft on Jeffires Ledge, 37 miles off Cape Elizabeth, yesterday morning it was learned late today. Efforts to find them had been unsuccessful, but it was hoped they may have been picked up by some passing vessel.

The entire Coast Guard fleet from the base at Gloucester, Mass., to Portland was called to join in the search, conducted today by the schooners Aberrance and Sunapee, of whose crews the missing men were members. Aid was given by destroyers, cutters and patrol boats.

Rev. W. P. White Dead; Noted Church Historian

Philadelphia, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The Rev. Dr. William Prescott White, widely known Presbyterian minister and recognized as an authority on the history of the Presbyterian church, died today. He was 87.

Dr. White for 33 years was financial secretary of Lincoln University and for more than 50 years was connected with the Synodical National Missions of Pennsylvania. He was former editor of the Pennsylvania Journal, which later became the Presbyterian Advance. Dr. White was graduated from Amherst College in 1867 and from the Princeton Theological Seminary in 1870. His first pastorate was at Plymouth, Pa. He is survived by two sons, W. McK. White, of Goshen, Ind., and Wray F. White, Kalamazoo, Mich.

COOLIDGE ADMINISTRATION DRAWS TO A CLOSE.

President Coolidge will soon be just Mr. Coolidge, private citizen, of Northampton, Massachusetts. With the signing of the cruiser bill, the last outstanding act of his administration has been brought to a conclusion. Nothing but routine business is scheduled for the Chief Executive's desk during the few days that remain before Mr. Hoover's inauguration.

Political interest is centered almost entirely upon the President-elect. The make-up of the new Cabinet, the calling of an extra session, the extent of tariff revision and form of farm relief that the new executive will sponsor—these are the subjects which concern official Washington. But with all the excitement over the change, and speculation as to the future, the American people generally will not lose sight for a moment of the great debt of gratitude which they owe the retiring President.

Few Presidents have left office with greater cause for satisfaction and fewer reasons for regret than Calvin Coolidge. The greatest tribute to his popularity and the confidence he had won was the unquestioned desire of millions of his fellow countrymen that he should forego personal desires and run again for the Presidency.

President Coolidge never compromised with his convictions for political expediency. He vetoed the bonus bill on the eve of the 1924 Republican convention; he twice vetoed the McNary-Haugen farm bill, and denounced it regardless of the danger of alienating the farm vote. He called to his side the men he wanted, despite the warnings of week-kneed politicians. He took a Morgan partner when he felt that he would best fit a certain job, and soon convinced the country that his selection was the best possible. He never went out of his way to cultivate or flatter "keymen" in Congress, yet maintained always the high respect of the leaders of that body.

He retires from office with prestige and popularity at their height. Mr. Coolidge detested anything that savored of the spectacular. He succeeded in remaining natural—being himself—through more than six years, and in that fact, doubtless lies the best explanation of his outstanding success.

CAPITAL PAYS HONOR TO FIRST PRESIDENT

NATION'S SHRINES VISITED

With one President approaching the end of his term and another man waiting to be inaugurated as the Nation's Chief Executive, the National Capital celebrated comprehensively yesterday th 197th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, first President of the United States.

Included in the city-wide observance were:

Address by Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to the United States, at the Memorial Continental Hall.

Masonic celebration and Boy Scout celebration at Mount Vernon, which was the mecca for thousands of visitors.

Observance of the day by both the Senate and the House of Representatives on Capitol Hill.

Washington's Policies Lauded.

Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, presided and former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, delivered the chief address at the municipal exercises at Poli's. To call the meeting to order, Senator Harrison used the historic gavel used by President Washington in officiating at the laying of the cornerstone of the Capitol September 18, 1793.

Mr. Lewis praised Washington for his policies of a strong union of the States and his determination to keep the new nation free of the labyrinth of European politics and wars.

"It was in this spirt," Mr. Lewis said, "that Washington in his farewell message proclaimed to the world that the policy of America as a people must be friendship with all—but politically as a nation to keep to our homes. It was then that he declared to Europe our warning—'stand back, hands off America. This continent belongs to the American people.'"

Brilliant Future Is Foreseen.

Holding the future to be as bright as the past has been, Mr. Lewis said, "On this natal day, as we salute the advent of a new President, paying due homage to the one retiring in honor, we find our security in the knowledge that as it was from Washington to Wilson, there will be continued from Coolidge and Hoover to those yet to come to the glory of power the preserving policies that have so long guided us, proclaiming, 'In matters of home, divide as we may; but against attacks from abroad united, whatever the day.'"

Invocation was asked by the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The colors were presented by a group of Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts and Proctor L. Dougherty, president of the Board of District Commissioners, led in a pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Following the delivery of the address by Mr. Lewis, a gold medal was presented to Charles William Hart, pupil of the Eastern High School, for the best essay written in a public competition on "Virginia's Contribution to the War of the Revolution." The presentation, in behalf of the Sons of the Revolution, was made by Representative Bland, of Virginia. Pupils of public and private schools of the District had competed for it.

Many Visit Nation's Shrines.

Fifteen hundred members of the Order of De Molay of the District and nearby States took part in the Masonic pilgrimages to Mount Vernon and Arlington National Cemetery. Informal exercises were held at Mount Vernon in observance of Washington's Birthday anniversary, and a brief ceremony was staged at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington. Grand masters of Masons throughout the country were in session at Alexandria to complete plans for erection of a memorial to "Washington, the Mason," on Shooters Hill, Alexandria.

Observance in the House was in the form of an address by Representative Beck, of Pennsylvania, an authority on the Constitution, while Washington's Farewell Address was read in the Senate by Senator Reed, of Missouri, who is about to retire from office. Owing to the press of legislative business, both the House and the Senate continued in session.

Hughes Asks Funds to Aid Washington Memorial Here

Building in Which Educational Interests Can Meet Is Called Most Fitting Memorial to the Ideals of Nation's First President.

New York, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Charles Evans Hughes, in a radio address tonight, took issue with those who would "debunk" the record of the first President.

Quoting from the estimates of and tributes to George Washington by two of his distinguished contemporaries, Mr. Hughes said:

"We like to know the intimate details of the lives of our eminent men," he continued, "but you can not know the mountain by rambling in the thickets about its slopes, however fascinating the maze and however thrilling the little discoveries."

Mr. Hughes devoted much of his address to an appeal for funds for the George Washington Memorial Building, projected for the Nation's Capital, a campaign for which is being waged by the George Washington Memorial Association. The association, Mr. Hughes said, is only trying to carry out Washington's wish "for 'an institution for the general diffusion of knowledge.'"

"If we can not repay our debt to Washington, we at least can recognize it and make our recognition more adequate," he said. "It is well that in so many of our communities there are monuments to his memory—crowned by that imposing obelisk in the City of Washington which in its sublime simplicity so fittingly symbolizes his character. In this practical age we should have more than a symbol. Our grateful tribute should take the useful form which he himself would have most desired. It should be predominantly educational."

What Washington most desired, Mr. Hughes said, was the development of the national spirit, and he believed that this could be greatly aided by the establishment of "an institution for the general diffusion of knowledge."

"One of the most important methods of developing national interest in matters of general concern," Mr. Hughes said, "is through the meetings of our great societies and organizations which give to the Nation, and to the world at large, the varied results of progress. What finer memorial could we erect to the character and ideals of Washington than a great building nobly planned in the Nation's Capital to serve as a meeting place for the great educational interests of the country?"

The proposed building, the foundations of which already have been laid on land given by the Government, is the "fitting memorial" of which he spoke, Mr. Hughes said. It is hoped to raise the necessary funds and have the building completed by 1932, the 200th anniversary of the birth of Washington, he said.

Mr. Hughes spoke from the studio of the National Broadcasting Co. here, the program being broadcast over WEAF and a coast-to-coast network of twenty stations.

Distilling Convicts Virginian and Bride

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 22.—Brought into court here today after fleeing to Wardensville, W. Va., following a raid on his house by police, who found two illicit liquor distilling plants in operation, Henry Conrad, a middle-aged carpenter, surprised the court and spectators by charging his wife, a bride of three weeks, of being guilty along with him.

Court officials admitted their amazement, saying they had expected Conrad to shoulder the entire blame and exonerate his wife, although in jumping from a second-story window when officers appeared at his home a few days ago, he left her with "the bag to hold."

Each was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $250.

2 Deaths Are Laid To Poisoned Liquor

Special to The Washington Post.

Weston, W. Va., Feb. 22.—Their lives snuffed out mysteriously within a few hours of each other, two men who came here Wednesday from Clarksburg are believed to have died of poisoned liquor.

The dead are Ferris Craft, 49, tool dresser, who had just returned to Weston after an absence of fifteen years in oil fields of other States, and Frank L. Stout, 46, a Clarksburg carpenter.

Both men came to Weston together, and both were said to have been intoxicated. Craft later got a room at a hotel, where he became violently ill yesterday, dying last night in a hospital. Stout applied last midnight at the police station for overnight lodging, was taken acutely ill and died this morning in a hospital. Stout leaves a widow and four children. Investigation of their deaths is under way.

SIR ESME REBUKES STIRRERS OF STRIFE

FIRST PRESIDENT LAUDED

Another link in the chain of friendship and mutual understanding between the United States and Great Britain was forged at the Memorial Continental Hall yesterday when Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador, delivered one of the principal addresses at Washington Birthday exercises of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution, District of Columbia Society Sons of the American Revolution and Children of the American Revolution.

Sir Esme praised the Kellogg treaty as an instrument that "must weigh heavily in the balance for the cause of peace" and scored those on both sides of the Atlantic who "enjoy stirring up trouble between us, whose lips distill gall and wormwood and whose pens are dipped in vitriol." The Kellogg treaty, he said, had made an incalculable difference in world affairs by making it unmoral to go to war.

Shortridge Lauds Washington.

Senator Shortridge, of California, the other speaker, recalled the attributes George Washington possessed as a man, a soldier and a statesman, which were of so much influence in national and international affairs. The senator emphasized the part Washington played in making a success of the constitutional convention, declaring the first President thereby "rendered a greater and more valuable service to liberty."

Greetings were expressed by Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel, director general, National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution; Mrs. Josiah A. Van Orsdel, president of the Children of the American Revolution; Mrs. David D. Caldwell, State regent, District of Columbia Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and by Kenneth S. Wales, president of the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Prize Medal Awarded.

For being the author of the best essay on American history, Mrs. John M. Beavers presented a medal to Burt M. Bromley, of George Washington University. Mrs. Beavers is vice president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, and presented the medal in behalf of the District of Columbia Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

The invocation was by the Rev. Z. Barney Philips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, and benediction by the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church.

Olivet Student Sent From Jail to Parents

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Donald Smith, Olivet College student, convicted last summer with two others in the burning of a fraternity house, has been paroled to his parents, A. D. Wood, commissioner of pardons and paroles, announced today.

Smith's father resigned as professor at the college after his son's conviction.

to police. After an intensive check for a day the officers suddenly ordered Miss Allen held in jail as a material witness, indicating they had made discoveries which confirmed parts of her story.

Tried as Extortionist.

According to Miss Allen, she was tried and freed on charges of extortion from Earl Nash, of Santa Barbara, in 1924. The jury disagreed and she was released without a second trial. At that time she was mentioned in connection with the Clarke mystery, she said, but nothing could be found to connect her definitely with it and the matter was dropped, she averred.

On two occasions bones were washed up on the beach at Santa Barbara, but the coroner declared they were not those of Clarke.

A week after the disappearance, a $5,000 reward was posted and a week later the then chief of police of Los Angeles, Charles Sebastian, received a letter demanding $75,000 for Clarke's return. Request for proof that Clarke was in the blackmailer's possession was immediately published in many newspapers, but no further word was received from the extortionists.

An intensive check of Miss Allen's story is being made by police.

Made Money Rapidly.

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—F. Lewis Clarke, Spokane millionaire, in whose murder at Santa Barbara, January, 1914, Mrs. Margaret Kelly has confessed to have been implicated, was a member of a prominent New England family. He was born at Bangor, Me., and was graduated from Harvard in the class of 1883.

He came to Spokane in 1885, where he engaged in the banking, realty and mining business, accumulating a big fortune on two land projects alone at Spokane. He made nearly $2,000,000 selling his holdings to the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railways. He was a yacht enthusiast and was commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club, New York, and a member of the Larchmont, Corinthian and Beverly Yacht Clubs of New York.

Mrs. Clarke is now visiting in New York, and her son, Theodore Clarke, is in business in Chicago.

Washington's Kin Dies As Nation Honors Him

San Francisco, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—While the country today was observing the birthday of George Washington, death came to his great-great-nephew, John Thornton Washington, 83 years old, in a hospital here.

He was a great-great-grandson of Samuel Washington, younger brother of the first President.

John T. Washington came to California in 1852 and since has resided in this State and Nevada. For 25 years he was in the newspaper business and spent the last six years delving into his ancestry. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Daniel Delahanty, of New York.

HOOVER HAILED MAN OF HOUR BY HERRICK

Will Not Mix in Europe's Affairs Nor Dodge Them, Says Ambassador.

LAUDS U. S. PEACE SPIRIT

Paris, Feb. 22 (United Press).—Herbert Hoover, as President of the United States, is not going to "mix up in Europe's affairs," but neither is he likely "to run away from Europe or any other continent in which his fellow citizens have great interests," said American Ambassador Myron T. Herrick tonight in his second Washington's Birthday speech.

The ambassador spoke at the traditional Washington's Birthday luncheon of Pan-American diplomats and again tonight at the annual dinner of the American Club of Paris at the Hotel George V.

Not Used by Washington.

"Attacks on 'entangling alliances' (a term Washington never used) and 'mixing up in Europe's affairs' (another phrase of unknown parentage), look to me like drawing your sword against a man of straw," said Herrick in his speech tonight. "As I see it, to trade with a man, to bank with a man, to buy and sell, loan and borrow, are not mixing up with his affairs.

European countries do not mix up in ours nor need we mix up in theirs, just because we are doing an ever-increasing volume of business with them. One of the reasons for electing him (Hoover) was because, with all his other useful and admirable qualities, he has a knowledge of foreign countries and a training in their business affairs which no other one of our Presidents ever has had. We needed just such a man at this moment."

The ambassador said there has been, in recent times, a great deal of loose talk about "mixing up in Europe's affairs" and some misquotations. In that connection he read four sentences from Washington's Farewell Address, making brief comment.

Washington Is Quoted.

"'If we remain one people under an efficient government,'" the ambassador read, "'the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance.' That time happily has arrived."

He continued reading:

"'With me a predominant motive has been to endeavor to gain time to our country to settle and mature its yet recent institutions, and to progress without interruption, to that degree of strength and consistency which is necessary to give it, humanly speaking, the command of its own fortunes.'

"This 'command of its own fortunes' which Washington desired and prepared for his country has been fully realized.

"'It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world.'

"This we have done.

"'We may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.'

U. S. Interest in War.

"We resorted to this arrangement only once when we became an 'associated power' during the recent war."

The ambassador said that since the summer of 1914, the United States' interest had been directed toward European affairs to a degree as great as it was "unexpected."

"During all that time," he continued, "there have been and there still are, capable and honest people who deplore and resent the fact, who announced its dangers, who urged that we break away.

"We not only did not follow this advice, but in the logical movement of events we have sometimes done exactly the contrary."

In his luncheon speech the ambassador said the spirit of peace "is nowhere more evident" than on the American continent. He predicted a bright future which will find cordial relations even more firmly entrenched in North and South America.

The luncheon was attended by two American ambassadors and 13 ministers.

Coast Guard to Escort Schooner Hit by Storm

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The four-masted schooner Sally Wren, out of Savannah for New York, with a cargo of lumber, was picked up off Winter Quarter, about 100 miles north of the Virginia Capes, today by the Coast Guard cutter Gresham, and probably will be towed to New York, it was said here tonight.

The vessel was in no danger other than having lost several of her sails during a severe blow off the coast yesterday morning. The Gresham was sent from New York to assist the vessel and picked her up about 9 o'clock this morning.

11 WOMEN, CHILDREN SAVED FROM STORM

DESCRIBES WILD SCENE

Rock Springs, Wyo., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Five women and six children, the vanguard of the party of 50 or 60 persons snowbound on a highway in the desolate wastes of the Red Desert since last Monday, reached the shelter of civilization here late today.

Facing famine and shivering from exposure, the plight of the party was relieved somewhat yesterday, when an airplane piloted by Edmund T. Allen dropped 1,000 pounds of provisions and blankets at the little camp, where the storm sufferers had huddled about their stranded caravan of motor trucks.

Rescuers, who had fought their way through the deep drifts brought the women and children to safety, while the men of the party remained behind to bring through the trucks.

The trucks carrying the group from New Mexico to a construction job near here, became stalled Monday, when a blizzard whipped across the desert and piled 5 to 6 feet of snow on the highway.

Edward Kiviaho, said to be a representative of the Department of Commerce, worked his way on foot with several others through the drifts, but was nearly frozen when highway workers trying to reach the party from Rock Springs found him.

His companions, Kiviaho said, collapsed and were taken care of by the workers. Exhausted from his long vigil in the open, Kiviaho was unable to give a detailed story of the experiences of the travelers.

Supplies dropped to the marooned party by Allen from a secial Boeing airplane, sent from Salt Lake City, included blankets to permit them to sleep warmly last night.

"It was worth a million to see those half-famished persons scrambling for those gunny sacks which meant life to them as they wildly waved their arms in thanks," said Allen.

A tale of suffering, impromptu military law and mutiny was told today by Herman C. Keiser, of Carlsbad, N. Mex., leader of the crew of the fleet of 23 snowbound trucks.

Keiser arrived here today with the first group rescued from the stranded party, but returned later to aid in bringing out the rest of the party. His face, bronzed by the glare of sun on snow, unshaven, and his eyes bloodshot and puffed from lack of sleep, Keiser's appearance alone told much of the story.

Says Storm Was Wild.

"It was the wildest snow I ever saw," he said. "Until the airplane with provisions arrived last night we had only a little food, and that was being rationed out in two scant meals a day. No one can realize what we suffered."

The temperature was far below zero all of the time the party was stranded, and it was dependent upon the bodies of the trucks for shelter from howling gales that piled snow across the desert. Lumber that was loaded on some of the trucks was burned to provide warmth.

Keiser applied something similar to military law to the outfit.

"It had to be done," he said today. "Some one had to be in control, and I assumed the position. Almost all of the men had been on my pay roll for several years, and they all were fine."

Near Mutiny Quelled.

A near mutiny occurred, however, when several of the men, after prolonged suffering from the cold, wanted to attempt to make it on foot to the Union Pacific Railroad tracks, some miles away, in hope of being able to stop a train.

"I realizid the extreme hazard of such a trip through an impenetrable blizzard, and squelched the plan, ordering the men to obey or accept the consequences. Forceful methods finally were necessary to quell the mutiny," he asserted.

"I believe, though, that the men were temporarily insane from the storm and the suffering they had undergone."

Women and children were placed in the trucks. The men could not sleep for the three nights the party was marooned because there was room in the trucks only for the women and children.

Grand Jury Indicts 83; Many for Bootlegging

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 22.—After being in session eleven days, examining 259 witnesses and returning 83 indictments, the Frederick County grand jury for the February term adjourned. In its report to the court, the jury declared that most of the indictments were violations of the prohibition law, in the form of "bootlegging," and while many persons had been indicted the surface had scarcely been scratched.

The report added that great difficulty was experienced in securing evidence from the witnesses, many of whom sought to shield the bootlegger. Reports of rum running and the manufacture of "moonshine" whisky were investigated from every section of the county. The criminal docket will be taken up next week.

The National United Committee for Law Enforcement will sponsor a meeting tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in Calvary Methodist Church, Columbia road near Fifteenth street northwest.

Clinton N. Howard, chairman of the committee, will take for his subject "The Black Hand on the Constitution."

In his bulletin issued to the various clergymen of the city announcing the meeting Howard said that as a result of the committee's campaign to clean up Washington before the inauguration "the law enforcement agencies have been quickened into action, the lawless element have run to cover and our investigator now operating under the Federal Prohibition Department is finding things very close since our exposure.

"The passage by the Senate of the Jones bill increasing penalties and providing for prison sentences, together with the approach of the Hoover administration, has doubtless done much to put the fear of the Lord into their (bootleggers') disloyal hearts."

MARINES ORDERED TO RETURN IN RIDER TO NAVAL BILL

Total—38.

Against the amendment:

Democrats—Broussard, Bruce, Hawes, Kendrick, Wagner—5.

Total—30.

The Nicaraguan vote came after the bill had been steered to the point of final passage.

The badly-shattered earlier opposition to the bill had concentrated its efforts on an attack against the $500,000 appropriation to be used after June 30 next for advance work on the second batch of cruisers, provided for in the cruiser bill.

An appropriation of $200,000 immediately available enables the Navy Department to begin work on the first five ships during the fiscal year which ends June 30 next.

Ten Cruisers Year, Charge.

Objection was not made to this nor was there objection to the expenditure of the $12,000,000 and more during the fiscal year 1930, this amount being presumably necessary to carry forward work begun on the first five ships. But the $500,000 expenditure to begin work on the second five, while work was progressing on the first five, was characterized as a "ten-cruisers-a-year" program and opposed by the group that has been fighting the bill throughout.

Senator Brookhart contended that the Senate could wait until this time next year and then make the first money available for the second batch of ships. Senator King offered an amendment which would make the $500,000 available "after January 1, 1930," instead of on July 1 next, as provided in the bill.

Senator Harrison said the chairman of the naval affairs committee, Senator Hale, and the ranking Democratic member of the committee, Senator Swanson, should be congratulated on the way they steered the naval legislation to passage against all obstacles, including those interposed by President Coolidge and Mr. Hoover, the President-elect.

Attacked by Harrison.

"So drunk with power—and it's the only way my friend from Maine ever gets drunk," shouted Harrison—"they come in and pass this important legislation in two days."

Declaring that neither the recommendations of the President nor the director of the budget had been followed by the naval committee Harrison maintained that senators should not be fooled as to the meaning of the provisions in the pending bill.

"How many different sorts of drunks does the senator get on?" interposed Senator Glass from the rear of the chamber.

Some Views on Drunk.

Senator Caraway then took the floor to carry forward the Harrison brand of facetious attack.

"I regret to see my friend drunk with desire——"

"And power," interjected Senator Tydings.

"That's a mixed drink," added Bruce.

Caraway completed his thought by charging that the committee had indulged in sharp practice in circumventing the recommendations of the administration.

"Will the senator tell us what he means by sharp practice?" asked Hale.

"When the senator gets sober he'll know what I mean," repled Caraway.

Senator Trammell, Democratic member of the committee, took the floor to oppose the amendments offered by the committee. But when the voting started there was no disposition to wage a fight, as it was realized that Senators Hale and Swanson had an overwhelming majority behind them.

Senator King's amendment was voted down viva voce and the committee amendments were all adopted by the same process.

VARE IS INELIGIBLE, COMMITTEE HOLDS

Senator King, Dissenting, Urges Pennsylvanian First Be Given Hearing.

FINAL VOTE IS UNLIKELY

The Reed Senate committee, appointed to investigate the nomination and election of William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, reported yesterday that Mr. Vare was not entitled to a seat in the Senate, Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, dissented, saying he was not willing to join his colleagues in this report until Vare had been heard.

"It is respectfully submitted," said the report, "that the evidence as to fraud and corruption in the primary election stands as it did when the committee filed its partial report with the Senate, and Mr. Vare and his attorneys have failed to rebut the findings of the committee touching the election records."

Senator James A. Reed (Democrat), chairman of the Senate committee submitting the report, gave notice that he would discuss it today.

The fate of the Reed report is in the hands of a Senate jammed with legislation and but a week to go. It is predicted that a vote on its acceptance or rejection will not be reached by March 4.

Supports Former Ruling.

The report made yesterday supports one made several months ago as to fraud in the primary and election.

Mr. Vare claims he was nominated in the primary and elected in 1925 to the Senate. William B. Wilson, Democratic candidate against Mr. Vare, claims he was elected and has a contest pending before the Senate.

The report made yesterday does not refer to the Wilson convention; that is in the committee on privileges and elections.

Senator Reed and his associates on the special committee reviewed the Vare case from the beginning of the 1925 primary. Their report contains about 30,000 words. They pointed out that members conducted a filibuster in the Senate to defeat the purpose of the inquiry and they had to resort to the Federal courts to enforce their authority and obtain the records.

The Senate instructed the Reed committee to determine whether, in the face of a prima facie case against him, the said Vare should be entitled to a seat in the United States Senate. "This question," the report of yesterday says, "is in no way related to the contest brought by the said William B. Wilson."

Special attention was given to the testimony of Charles Edwin Fox, who had been an assistant district attorney for fifteen years prior to May, 1925, and a special prosecutor for election cases.

Fox Testimony Heard.

"Mr. Fox testified in detail concerning the election frauds which were committed in connection with the election in question and for which prosecutions were brought," the committee report declared. "The activities of the Republican organization in Philadelphia in connection with election frauds were made very clear by the testimony of this witness. He testified that in practically every case prosecuted by his office and involving the commission of election or registration offenses he was interviewed by the leader of the ward in which the offense was committed, often even before counsel had been secured.

"One of the most notable instances of the condonation of an election offense by a ward leader was the case cited by Mr. Fox in which a division leader was fined for forcibly taking a registry book from the registrar for the purpose of illegal registration. In this case a circular letter was sent through the ward stating that it had the approval of the ward leader and calling for contributions to help the defendant pay his fine.

"The division leader involved in the case was not the only official of the Republican organization who actively participated in registration or election offenses. Five other cases were mentioned by Mr. Fox, in each of which the active perpetrator of the fraud in question was the official representative of the Republican organization, and in each of these cases this representative received a substantial jail sentence. Each of these cases arose out of the 1925 election."

Vare Recognized as Boss.

Mr. Fox testified that Mr. Vare was the recognized boss and dictator of the Republican city committee of Philadelphia.

The testimony of other witnesses was cited to show that fraud was common, and that the Vare organization was behind the workers.

The Reed report calls attention to the fact that on December 22, 1928, the committee accorded Mr. Vare an opportunity to make answer. Francis S. Brown, January 4, told the committee Mr. Vare was physically unable to confer with anybody.

There was some doubt at that time as to the real condition of Mr. Vare, but it is now known he is very sick and his friends are sure that he will never claim the seat in the Senate. For this reason it is understood Senator Reed will not press for a vote on the report made yesterday. Mr. Vare is now in Florida trying to regain his health.

EXECUTIONER OF 140 IS SUICIDE VICTIM

Charles Becker, who had been convicted, along with several New York gangsters, of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

He also was the chief executioner for Hans Schmidt, who was convicted of murder.

Another time that fate had a part in his life was when Leo Levandowski, who one time had been his assistant in the prison, was found guilty of murder and sent to the electric chair. Just before Levandowski was killed he remarked to Hulbert:

"Do a good job, Mr. Hulbert."

One condemned man "paid" Hulbert for his work. Gordon Hamby was convicted of killing a man in Brooklyn and sentenced to the electric chair. He sent the executioner a check for $150 which was made out on "The Bank of Hell" and signed "The Devil."

Hulbert did not have the sanguine appearance which generally is associated with a man in his role of life. He was small, wiry, had rather faded eyes and a shiny bald head.

He had a great liking for the motion pictures and was especially keen on seeing pictures through which the main theme was love. Also he was a devotee to gardening.

Always he had held the fear that he might be killed by the relative or friend of some one on whom he had turned the death current. He made very few trips away from Auburn, and these only in his official capacity as executioner. He had to go to Trenton, N. J., to perform the services there and also to Charlestown, Mass. Always when he went he took along a strong bodyguard.

He was adverse to talking publicly and at the time he resigned refused to talk with newspaper men, preferring to live his quiet existence in the home where he was found dead today.

Day in Congress

SENATE.

Met at noon and recessed at 6:05 to noon today.

Senator Reed (Democrat), Missouri, read Washington's farewell address.

Adopted, 38 to 30, an amendment to the Navy appropriation bill providing for withdrawal of American marines from Nicaragua.

Adopted another amendment to the bill providing $12,370,000 for new cruisers.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, submitted a minority report recommending that no action be taken until Vare is able to answer the charges of excess expenditures in his campaign.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, talked about the Vestris disaster and declared that legislation was needed to make the sea safe for passenger traffic.

HOUSE.

Met at noon and adjourned at 5:35 to noon today. Took up the second deficiency bill.

Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, charged that House leaders had broken a solemn promise by permitting the proposed $24,000,000 increase for prohibition die in committee.

Adopted a resolution congratulating Speaker Longworth upon the occasion of his receiving the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of Pennsylvania.

Representative Boylan (Democrat), New York, proposed that the Congressional Record be modernized by the publication of comic stripe, cartoons, headlines and editorials.

Representative Black (Democrat), New York, introduced a resolution to provide a shelter for the reporters who have to stand outside the Hoover residence covering the President-elect.

Ways and means committee considered the question of free entry of Philippine products.

BILL ASKS SHELTER FOR MEN OF PRESS

$5,000 Is Provided to Build Protection for Reporters Covering Hoover.

HAVE WAITED IN SNOW

(Associated Press.)

News writers who have been compelled to stand outside President-elect Hoover's residence and endure the vagaries of winter weather to await news would be provided a temporary shelter under a resolution introduced yesterday by Representative Black (Democrat), New York.

For several days news writers assigned to "cover" Mr. Hoover, have been either standing out in the heavy snow that fell here recently, or have hired heated taxicabs to wait in, so as to be present to interview Mr. Hoover's callers as they emerge from the residence.

Under the resolution, $5,000 would be provided for the erection of temporary shelter.

"The American public has been looking anxiously for the new administration to take the chill off the White House," Mr. Black said in a statement commenting on the resolution. "Instead we find that the journalists attending on Mr. Hoover are undergoing rigors of climate that even George Washington did not have to endure at Valley Forge.

"Of course," Black's statement continued, "we realize that Mr. Hoover's attention is being absorbed by the demands of patriots seeking a warm and comfortable place around his political fireplace. While Mr. Hoover, in the comfort of his mansion, is listening to the demands of dry leaders, it seems only fair that a dry Congress should provide a dry igloo for the reporters outside."

SALT CREEK INQUIRY EXTENSION OPPOSED

VOTE IS EXPECTED TODAY

(Associated Press.)

A sharp contest developed yesterday in the Senate lands committee over a proposal of Chairman Nye to continue the investigation into the 8-year-old leases on the Salt Creek, Wyo., oil fields, and a vote was deferred until today.

Thomas Sterling, counsel for the committee, reported recently, after a six months' study, that the leases were valid, but this was not acceptable to Senator Nye and some other members, who are seeking a further inquiry into the charges that the leases were fraudulently obtained.

Opposition, however, developed to Nye's proposal, and a suggestion was made to place the entire investigation into the hands of the Department of Justice.

Those urging further inquiry by the committee declared that Sterling, the counsel, as a member of the Senate in 1920 from South Dakota, was the author of amendments to the leasing act which permitted some of the leases on the Salt Creek field. This was denied, but a movement is under way to dispose of Sterling as counsel in the inquiry.

While Senator Nye was confident several days ago of a majority for his resolution to extend the authority of the committee for a further inquiry, members of the committee declared last night there had been some defections among his supporters.

Senator Walsh, of Montana, the leader of Democrats on the committee, said the minority members were not ready to announce their position until further study of the proposition had been made today.

Meanwhile, the Department of Justice is investigating charges of a monopoly in the Salt Creek fields. Robert C. Bell an Assistant Attorney General, at the time the leases were granted, has charged that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana has a monopoly on the Salt Creek output through a subsidiary, the Mid-West Refining Co.

Bell contends that the Mid-West actually controls most of the leases in the field. Senator Robinson (Republican), of Indiana, urged in the Senate this week that Bell be employed as counsel and that the committee continue the investigation.

Robinson declared the Government had been defrauded of billions of dollars by the leases, which were granted in the closing days of the Wilson administration and early in the Harding regime.

Burned Man Unhurt As Auto Overturns

Machines In Crash While Fire Victim Rushes for Medical Aid.

Two Montgomery County residents yesterday narrowly escaped injury when the automobile in which they were riding turned over three times after an accident on the Colesville pike. William Johnson, owner of the car, was being carried to a doctor for treatment of painful burns he had received in a furnace backfire.

Johnson is an employe of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission pumping station at Sandy Spring, Md. He was tending a furnace yesterday when the fire became low. He tossed kerosene on the fire to encourage the blaze. A tongue of flame sprang from the furnace and burned the entire front of his face, narrowly missing his eyes.

Charles Crumm, also of Sandy Spring, another employe, placed Johnson in the latter's car and started for the doctor. On the way the automobile and a car driven by Charles Robertson, 1740 K street northwest, collided on the Colesville pike at Sligo Hill.

CORPORATION COUNSEL OPPOSES DELAY IN BURLINGAME TRIAL

formally to the trial board when it convenes in the usual Police Trial Board room on the second floor of the Sixth Police Precinct Station this morning, the whim of the instigator of the charges and the principal witness of the prosecution may force the trial forward immediately.

Bride, who said he was anxious to oblige the defense attorneys, not only told them last night that he could not agree to a postponement, but is expected to formally oppose any motion for postponement which may be made before the trial board this morning.

Mrs. Blalock came back to Washington voluntarily and is under the guard of agents of the Department of Justice, and she has been promised every possible protection and courtesy, but she doesn't want to stay long in Washington and intends to leave the city again as soon as she may.

Mrs. Blalock to Depart.

Although there is ample legal authority to prevent her departure, inasmuch as she has been served with a subpena by the United States Government demanding her presence before the grand jury, there seems to be a decided aversion on the part of officials to anything which might smack of the use of force against her.

The program which has been worked out calls for her appearance before the trial board today and before the grand jury at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

It was said that she had been promised that her testimony and questioning before the grand jury could be concluded by 6 o'clock Monday night, after which time she is to be permitted to go wherever she pleases with freedom, provided only that she promises to appear again as a witness if she is needed as a result of future court action against Burlingame which might result if the jury indicts him.

Such a program would not admit of postponement of the trial until Wednesday morning, the time requested by Leahy and Woodard.

The latter attorney has been a member of the defense legal staff only for the last two days and has not had time to familiarize himself with the case as he wants to.

Then, too, defense attorneys pointed out yesterday was a holiday and it was difficult or impossible to get in touch with persons they wish to consult.

Subpena Defective, Belief.

There seemed to be some question about the authority of the District to hold Mrs. Blalock under the subpena served on her yesterday by Bride to appear as a witness before the special trial board, and the proposal apparently fell through because it did not meet with the approval of the district attorney's office.

The trial board is composed of Maj. D. A. Davidson, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, chairman; Dr. Edgar Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, and William P. Richards, District tax assessor. These men were selected by the District Commissioners earlier in the week in line with the recommendation of Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, that Burlingame be tried by a special trial board upon which there would be no policemen.

No Delay Is Expected.

What will be done about the postponement, of course, will depend on the decision of the trial board, but it was predicted last night that the trial will go forward today, even if later it is found necessary to take a recess of a day or two the first of next week.

Mrs. Blalock will be the principal witness against the captain today. Bride, who will prosecute the case, assisted by Fowler, will develop through her testimony the story of the letters which are the basis of the formal charges against Burlingame. It is expected she will be on the witness stand for some time.

Defense attorneys must be given the privilege of cross-examining her, and there have been reports that the cross-examination will not be too gently sympathetic, but neither Leahy nor Woodard last night would discuss the matter.

Blanton May Be Heard.

Representative Blanton also may be a witness called by the prosecution, but his testimony is not expected to require much time, inasmuch as it is understood he will be asked to identify papers and state facts in explanation of his connection with the case.

More than 25 witnesses have been summoned, it is said, but the exact number is not known. Neither is it known how long the trial will last. Bride declared there would be no disposition to drag it out unnecessarily. It was suggested that the trial might be ended by Wednesday.

Burlingame Is Prepared.

It is said to have been repaired, but Burlingame ordered its repair through the regular channels and the bill for repairs is in the hands of Bride.

Despite his silence since the charges against him flared into the open on the front pages of newspapers, Burlingame has not been idle in preparing his defense against the attack upon him by his one-time friend.

It is reported that he is prepared to explain the letters and his relations with Mrs. Blalock on the ground of police work. He used the woman's friendship to gain information about liquor law violations and got valuable information from her which helped him materially in policing his precinct.

At the time the charges were first made public he declared that he was prepared to prove through reputable witnesses that his relations with his accuser were "perfectly honorable and above board."

While the trial board proceedings are open to the public and a crowd is expected to gain entrance, officials have done nothing to enhance the "show" in the way of additional facilities for onlookers.

Many of the chairs available will be occupied by agents of the Department of Justice and police and other officials.

TEXT OF COOLIDGE SPEECH

The address of President Coolidge last evening before the midwinter convention of George Washington University, was as follows:

My Fellow Countrymen:

Compared with some of the older nations, our holidays are few in number. Being less frequent, they are given a more formal observance. With the possible exception of the Fourth Day of July, none of them on the secular side arouses any more popular interest than the birthday of George Washington. Of course, he is honored for what he did. He was the leader in a successful struggle for independence, which gave him a justified military reputation. He was also the foremost influence in securing the adoption of our Federal Constitution which gave us a free republic. Naturally he was chosen the first President. In this office he brought into practical operation the theories of our National Government, which demonstrated that he was not only a military leader, but a sound and patriotic statesman. In addition to all his public service, he was a man of affairs. He ranks as the best business man of his day. Had there been no Revolutionary War, he would undoubtedly have become the foremost colonial figure of his time.

It is because of his success in so many fields of action that his memory makes such a wide appeal. Wherever men love liberty we find a veneration for the name of George Washington. Wherever there are aspirations for a free government, whether already in being or in future expectation, there is admiration for the institutions he established. Wherever purity of character and self-sacrificing public service are admired, his name is honored and revered. Almost alone of the great figures of history, he can be accepted without any qualifications or reservations. Not only is his fame world-wide, but his life is held in universal respect.

In a day when t'll.ng the soil went mostly by the rule of thumb, we find him developing agriculture in a scientific way. While others were speculating, usually at a loss, he was investing in land and making a profit. When the political thought of his day was centered for the most part in each local colony, he had the vision to see and the understanding to comprehend the advantages of a Federal Union. Although his own State of Virginia had a college in his youth, and there were others in the North, with the possible exception of some short studies in surveying he did not attend any of the higher institutions of learning. Yet he became a well-educated man himself, and in many of his public statements, and finally in his will, he was careful to disclose his views on the importance to republican institutions, of Government-supported free schools, and opportunity for higher education.

Washington Nationally Minded.

Here again he showed distinctly that he was nationally minded, because he coupled the personal benefits of a centralized university training with the cultivation of a national spirit in the students. Since his day so many local colleges and State universities have been established that the provisions of his will have never been put into execution. Yet it is a satisfaction to have this institution at least bearing his name in the National Capital. The views which he expressed on the all-important subject of education have that ring of truth and that soundness which makes them apply with the same force today as they had when they were uttered.

Although he, like Lincoln, did not have opportunity to take a college degree, yet, like the Great Emancipator, the Father of his Country had the advantage of working with a citizenship which was well permeated with college men, whom he constantly sought for his advisers in positions of responsibility. It should always be remembered that unless many of their associates had secured the liberal education which comes from college training, the career of both Washington and Lincoln would have been utterly impossible. Without well-educated leaders and general diffusion of learning among the people they would have had no success.

Outside of college walls, but usually under the guidance of competent instruction, Washington was a most painstaking and thorough student. He gained the position which he held through application to hard work. By that means his mind became well trained. He knew how to think.

Not only in what Washington said do we find much wise counsel relating to education, but we find even more in the man himself. His life justifies the existence and demonstrates the necessity of institutions for giving to our youth that broad culture which comes from application to a course in the liberal arts. We need men of technical training. They are much more necessary now than they were in the Revolutionary period. We could not maintain our modern life for any length of time without them. Washington himself would be entitled to considerable rank as an engineer in his day. It is necessary for our progress to have individuals who make a life study of one subject to the exclusion of everything else. The danger to them and from them lies in their becoming lost in particulars. While they are wonderfully skilled in their own subject, they often do not comprehend its relation to other subjects.

There would be a place in the world for the soldier and sailor who could see nothing but national defense, a place for the pacifist who would never engage in war and had no comprehension of international relations, for the physicist who had little interest in spiritual ideals, and a place in every large enterprise for the experts in accounting, in production, in transportation and in merchandising, though they might understand nothing of the broad principles of political economy. But these talents will reach their greatest usefulness only when directed and coordinated by the wisdom of a comprehending executive who may not always know, but who rarely fails to understand.

It was in this field that Washington appears to have excelled. He could not have written the Declaration of Independence. Yet, as a statesman he was easily the superior of Jefferson. He could not have prepared the intricate report on manufactures. Yet he was a far better business man that Hamilton. His words and actions were such that he inspired confidence. The country followed him because it trusted him. They were willing to take his judgment concerning subjects which they did not themselves comprehend. In him was the essence of all great leadership, a power which gives men faith. The people looked on him and believed. They believed in themselves, in their country, and in their future destiny. In that faith they conquered.

It is possible that this kind of talent is born, not made. Yet, as we study the lives of those who have possessed it, we can not escape the conviction that it is enlarged by rigorous training. The only military experience that Lincoln ever had was a few days' service in the Black Hawk War, to which he always referred with a mixture of amusement. Yet, from his early youth we find him constantly employed in the deepest of study trying to learn how to think. Mathematical accuracy was no mere figure of speech with him. His old note papers show that he was engaged in demonstrating his conclusions in accordance with the principles of geometry. When he came to be tried out in great conflict the dispatches he sent to his armies in the field indicate that his military judgment was unsurpassed by that of any of his generals. When the great Jefferson, master writer, brilliantly discoursing on the rights of man, was markedly indifferent to declaring and defending the rights of his countrymen, it was the practical Washington who was bending all his energies to make the rights of man a reality by establishing this republic under a Federal Constitution.

Must Support Colleges.

In all the efforts which our institutions of learning are making to develop science they ought not to fail to put a large emphasis on the development of wisdom. We shall fail if we put all our endowments, all our honor and all our efforts into our technical schools and leave unsupported our schools of liberal arts. It will be found just as impossible to secure progress without them as it is to secure civilization without religion.

In addition to the great example of his life, he left a legacy of wise advice and counsel to his fellow countrymen concerning their relations to each other, to their Government and to their God. As he was about to leave the Army at the close of the Revolutionary War in June, 1783, he issued a letter addressed to the governors of the several States in which he summed up his solicitous interest in the cultivation of good citizenship in the following paragraph:

"I now make it my earnest prayer that God would have you and the State over which you preside in His holy protection; that He would incline the hearts of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to Government; to entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another, for their fellow citizens of the United States at large, and particularly for their brethren who have served in the field, and, finally, that He would most graciously be pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the Divine Author of our blessed religion and without an humble imitation of Whose example in these things we can never hope to be a happy Nation."

His better known Farewell Address contains nothing finer than this simple, direct, but all-embracing admonition.

Washington was one of the first in a practical way to conceive of the United States as an independent establishment. Before him it had been a province. After him it was a nation. Even following the Revolution there were many people in this country who clung to the old thought that we were a European dependency. If we were not to look to England, then we must look to France. It was the clear belief of Washington that we must look to ourselves. Habits of thought live on. There are still those among us who have an inferiority complex and there are still people in Europe who regard us as a province. He therefore warned us in his farewell address to beware of permanent and political alliances. The phrase entangling alliances is not from him, but from Jefferson.

What Is Meant by "Alliances."

In the thought of that day an alliance meant the banding together of two or more nations for offensive and defensive purposes against certain other nations either expressed or implied. It was a purely artificial creation. It had no reference to an association of practically all nations in an attempt to recognize their common interests and discharge their common obligations. While we should at all times defend our own independence and maintain our sovereignty, we should not forget that all nations, as well as individuals, have natural and inalienable rights "of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," in the words of Jefferson, and, while we should fail disgracefully in our mission in the world if we did not protect those rights for ourselves, we shall also fail if we do not respect them in others.

This principle was clearly understood by our first President, and, being understood, he did not hesitate to put it into operation. When the French undertook to interfere in our affairs in such a way as to threaten the integrity of our Government, he called them to account. When our own citizens, on the other hand, were resentfully refusing to recognize the rights of English subjects, Washington was equally insistent that our Government and our citizens should faithfully discharge their legal obligations—even to our Tory enemies. The Revolutionary War inevitably left many undecided questions pending between the United States and Great Britain. There was the question of turning over to this country certain outposts. There were also certain boundary disputes which were not adjusted until well into the next century. These in turn were followed by differences concerning fisheries. Of course every one recalls the difficulties under which we suffered as neutrals during the Napoleonic era, which resulted in the War of 1812. A like experience came to us in the World War. We have also had issues arise, sometimes of a serious and threatening nature, with many other countries. We had them during the early period of our national life and shall undoubtedly continue to have them in the future. Both foreign and domestic affairs will constantly produce new questions for consideration.

Those who feel in a considerable state of alarm when they learn that there are subjects requiring diplomatic adjustment at the present time would probably be somewhat relieved if they would consider the history of our international relations. So long as we continue as a Nation we shall have such relations. Because there are matters which require adjustment is no reason for grave concern. There are more and more methods by which the certainty increases that they will be composed.

Foreign Relations Happy.

It is possible to say of our foreign relations at the present time that they have rarely been in a more happy condition. The uncertainties which have existed south of the Rio Grande have been very much relieved. The domestic disorders in Central America are being adjusted with a satisfaction that is almost universal. Even the mouths of those who would rather criticize us than have us do right have been stopped. The recent Pan-American Congress held in Washington exhibited a spirit of friendliness and good will which was most gratifying. Competent and experienced observers have assured me that our relations with South America are on the most satisfactory basis that they have been for 25 years. On the far side of the Pacific our situation is equally satisfactory. We have no important unadjusted problem with the government of any European nation, with the exception of Russia. Outside of that country all the issues that arose, even out of the World War, have been adjusted.

Of course, our citizens meet the citizens of other countries in commercial rivalry in the market places of the world. That will always continue. It is the natural and inevitable result of foreign trade. But it does not raise any issue between our Government and other governments. We believe in a policy of national defense and maintain an Army and a Navy for that purpose. Other countries have similar military establishments. We are committed to the principle of limitation of armaments. The other great powers, through the public opinion of their people and the binding obligation of their treaties, are more firmly committed to this principle than we are. Each government is conscientiously seeking to extend this principle. It does not raise any issue among us.

It seems desirable to mention this subject in order that the people of the United States may have my opinion concerning it. We have recently had a national campaign in which, of course, the opposition party was expected to criticize the foreign policy of the Government and suggest that important unsettled issues were gravely interfering with the friendly attitude which we desire to cultivate abroad. In other countries there will be similar campaigns, where the parties out of power will criticize their governments in a like manner. There was nothing in our election to indicate that our own country took such statements seriously, and I therefore trust they will not be taken seriously abroad.

On Friendly Terms With Most.

For the same reason, our people should not take seriously the campaign utterances of those who may be seeking to supersede the governments in power in other countries. Political utterances of this nature should be carefully differentiated from statements by responsible government authorities. I should like the people of the United States to know that at the present time there are no questions of importance awaiting settlement between our Government and any of the European governments with which we have relations. Our Government is on the most cordial and friendly terms with all of them.

Because this is true, there should be an attitude of kindness and good will between our people and all the European people. Whenever we see statements constantly made and seriously entertained concerning the conduct and intentions of our Government likely to prejudice it at home or abroad there comes a time when a candid presentation of the facts is required to promote a state of better understanding. Such an expression is entirely different from a constant attitude of fault-finding and hostility toward everything that is foreign. The governments are friendly. The people and the press should be friendly. The respect and confidence of European governments is especially evidenced by the unanimous request, not to say insistence, that citizens of the United States should contribute their assistance and counsel in the effort to make a final adjustment of the problem of reparations.

Of course in past negotiations we have reached conclusions with them through the necessary process of give and take, but their actions have demonstrated that their governments feel that our conduct has been such that they can trust us. After all, the great measure of our standing in the world is determined by whether other nations turn to us for assistance when they have difficulties among themselves. Our very detachment puts us in the position where we are constantly rendering a service to the world which would not otherwise be possible. While we are not associated with any particular foreign group, in the last analysis they all know that they can apply to us when they are in need of friendly offices.

Value in U. S. Isolation.

This is the position which I judge Washington wished his country to occupy. While he warned us against alliances with any, he was no less urgent in counseling the maintenance of friendly relations with all. As our strength has increased, as our power to maintain our independent position has grown, the wisdom of his warning and his counsel has become more and more apparent. Some nations are so situated that it has been and is now necessary for them to seek understandings with others in order to perpetuate their own existence. Others have interests so detached and territory so scattered that they can best protect themselves by some method of regional relations. Our situation is such that we are and can remain unhampered by any such necessities. We do not seek isolation for its own sake, or in order that we may avoid responsibility, but we cherish our position of unprejudiced detachment, because through that means we can best meet our world obligations. If we became closely identified with any specific grouping of nations, however advantageous it might be to us, we could not hope to continue to perform that service.

As we study the statesmanship of Washington, as we see it demonstrated in our domestic and foreign experience, he becomes a larger and larger figure. The clearness of his intellect, the soundness of his judgment, the wisdom of his counsel, the disinterested patriotism of his actions, are constantly revealed to us with a new and compelling force. The reverence for his memory continues to increase. The people of the United States feel that they were exalted in his victory. The people of England feel that even in the defeat of their arms abroad he carried their ideals to victory at home. Such a conquest could not be made save by an exponent of universal truth.

In conferring the degrees on the President and Mrs. Coolidge, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, read the following citations:

Regarding Mr. Coolidge—"Conservative leader during a period when thoughtful, firm action alone could hold the confidence of the people. Proponent at the same time of a forward looking social procedure, sponsoring scientific endeavors, espousing a program of economic responsibility, arousing in the Nation a self-imposed feeling for cooperation and good will. Patron of education and of culture, respected leader of our people—the President of the United States of America."

Regarding Mrs. Coolidge—"Combining gift in exquisite taste and gracious kindliness with an uncommonly clear and understanding mind, you have touched life and it has reacted warm and true. BOYS FACE CHARGES IN LEE RELIC THEFT

MANY ITEMS RECOVERED

Two boys of nearby Virginia were arrested yesterday and charged with larceny in connection with the mysterious disappearance several years ago of valuable relics from the Ravensworth Farm, estate of Robert E. Lee.

They are Douglas Dove, white, 17 years old, of Arlington, and Lem Newman, colored, of Alexandria. They are being held in the Fairfax County Jail.

The arrest of the boys came about after Dr. Charles Munson, of Arlington, had purchased several articles from Newman and had later seen stories in Washington papers about the disappearance of the Lee relics. He communicated with Dr. George Bolling Lee, of New York, and then directed the attention of Arlington County police to the two boys.

Police said that they found a wooden gun case, three large vases, several candlesticks and two mahogany china cabinet doors, formerly the property of Gen. Lee, at the home of Dr. Munson.

Dove was released on $2,000 bond. The boys will be given a hearing today at 9 o'clock before Justice of the Peace A. C. Ritchie at Fairfax.

Sheriff Eppa Kirby, of Fairfax County, who for several months has been investigating the loss of the many articles at the Lee estate, said last night that, following the arrest of the two boys, he returned to Alexandria where, after visiting several homes, located a large quantity of priceless relics said to have come from the Ravenworth farm. One home was visited in Washington where articles were found.

Dry Fund Promise Broken, Is Charge

Bankhead Accuses Leaders in House After Bill Dies in Conference.

(Associated Press.)

Republican leaders were accused in the House yesterday by Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, with having broken "what amounted to a solemn promise" to the membership by deciding to let the proposed $24,000,000 increase for prohibition enforcement die in a conference committee.

The Alabaman recited the plan of the leaders to let the first deficiency supply bill, carrying the huge sum, remain with the conference group and report out a second deficiency measure embodying all items of the first, except that for dry law enforcement.

Representative Cramton (Republican), Michigan, one of the members of the conference committee, said if any promises had been made they had been nullified by the House in its refusal to grant consent for the first deficiency measure to go to conference. A special rule was adopted after the consent had been refused.

Kellogg Peace Pact Scored by Tinkham

Says International Interests Are Working Against U.S.; Hits Standard Oil.

Declaring approval of the Kellogg antiwar treaty was the first United States commitment to internationalism, Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, charged in the House yesterday that international interests were seeking to have this Government abandon its policy of no foreign entanglements and enter the League of Nations.

Speaking with reference to his resolution demanding a congressional inquiry into expenditures by international interests and bankers to influence America's foreign policy, the Bay Stater declared that John D. Rockefeller, Ivy Lee, his publicity agent, and the Standard Oil Co. were open propagandists against the interests of the United States.

Tinkham said he would reintroduce his resolution at the next Congress and then cited that since its original introduction, last January 3, J. Pierpont Morgan, leading American international banker and Owen D. Young, head of a large international concern, had been approved by the Government to handle the German reparations problem.

SHIP SAFETY RULES URGED BY WAGNER

Senator Caustic Over Report on Vestris, Called Effort to Whitewash Officials.

LIABILITY PLANS DECRIED

Imploring the Senate to no longer ignore the tragic conditions exposed by the sinking of the ill-fated Vestris, with its resultant loss in lives, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, in a speech yesterday asked that steps be taken to assure safety on the sea, and to assure those who travel that their Government will afford them protection.

Senator Wagner, who was heard by crowded galleries, branded the report of Dickerson N. Hoover, inspector general of the Steamboat Inspection Service, as a whitewash for that body and asked why the conditions exposed had not been attended to prior to the sailing of the vessel.

He flayed Coolidge economy, if it is to extend to neglect in the protection of human lives, and declared that it will have no small effect in keeping the American flag from the high seas.

Comment Brings Results.

The caustic comment and facts presented by the junior New York senator almost immediately bore fruit, for Senator Wesley L. Jones (Republican), Washington, chairman of the Senate committee on commerce, arose at the conclusion of his remarks and assured him that the Senate committee will not fail to act on the needs for protecting those traveling on ships.

Senator Jones said that a subcommittee headed by Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), California, is considering the legislative needs to improve the situation, and although it may not get through its work in the present Congress, it will be attended to at the next session.

Senator Wagner said that every report made on the sinking of the Vestris "compels the conclusion that the Vestris was ill prepared to serve as a human carrier upon the high seas."

Liability Plans Decried.

At the same time the senator turned to the question of liability. He referred to the sinking of the Titanic and declared this was a British vessel which applied to the American courts for limitation of liability and $90,000 was made available for claimants, while under the British rule 40 times as much, $3,500,000, would have been available.

Moreover, he pointed out that the Vestris is a British vessel and has applied to the American courts in a similar manner.

"I am advised that the amount available to claimants will not exceed $40,000," Senator Wagner continued. "Had they gone to a British court for relief the owners would have had to pay 180,000 pounds sterling, 22 times as much."

EXTRA SESSION PROGRAM.

Leaders in the House exercised sound judgment in providing for hearings on the tariff schedule by the ways and means committee during the present session, so that a tariff bill may reach the floor soon after the opening of the extra session. The committee is now completing its task, having listened to pleas for increased duties from almost every industry. Even with these hearings out of the way, Congress will have sufficient difficulty writing a tariff schedule to give zest to any extra session.

Now an effort is being made to expedite the enactment of a farm-relief measure. A provision has been inserted in the second deficiency bill to permit the committee on agriculture to conduct hearings on the proposed agricultural program between the end of the short session and the beginning of the extra session. Indications are that President-elect Hoover will call the extra session to meet some time after April 20, the exact date to be fixed later. This would allow sufficient time to whip an agricultural bill into shape. Chairman Haugen has indicated that the hearings will be held in Washington and that all witnesses necessary will be brought here.

The wishes of the incoming administration in regard to farm relief are generally well known, and the situation has been thoroughly studied. The committee is fully cognizant of how far Congress will go in extending aid to the farmers. There is no reason for extended delay in drafting a satisfactory bill. On the other hand there are a number of good reasons for hastening action. Agricultural interests will be sorely disappointed if Congress does not provide relief that can be applied to this year's crops. The beginning of the session in April will leave only a short time before summer weather sets in, which makes it necessary to expedite the work in every way. If the agricultural bills are not ready for consideration when Congress convenes other matters may take precedence and again delay the relief program. Whether or not the extra session is to be limited to the tariff and agricultural relief, it will be to the interest of every one to have the agricultural committee proceed with hearings immediately following adjournment on March 4.

COL. LINDBERGH AS ADVISER.

The appointment of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to the post of technical adviser in aeronautics to the Department of Commerce sets at rest rumors that he would succeed William P. MacCracken as Assistant Secretary. The post he has accepted is the more appropriate. In it he will not be tied down to an executive desk but will be free to pursue his numerous activities in practical aviation. His advice will be available to the Government whenever it is needed, as in the past, but with the difference that it can be called for officially instead of unofficially. The arrangement will prove valuable both to the Government and to Col. Lindbergh.

It is to be hoped that the appointment presages a new governmental policy. There are hundreds of experts in one line or another whose advice should be available to the Government. Such experts, as a general thing, occupy high positions in commerce and industry and they could not afford to accept a Government post even if places were found for them.

Col. Lindbergh now holds half a dozen positions, each having to do with aviation. He is technical adviser to the Transcontinental Air Transport and Pan-American Airways. He has an important post with the Guggenheim Fund for the promotion of aeronautics. He has become, in effect, a kind of "interlocking director," through whom the advances in aviation worked out by any one company may be transmitted expeditiously to the entire industry.

FOR BETTER LAWYERS.

The legal profession long has talked of what is to be done to elevate its standards. Numerous suggestions have been brought forward, few of which, however, were practicable. There is general agreement that something should be done, but no Moses has appeared to formulate a program of reform. The practice of law is undergoing a constant change, and probably it will be improved only by gradual effort. The first step, of course, involves careful selection of those who are permitted to become lawyers.

The New York State Court of Appeals has adopted a new rule governing admission to the bar. At present an individual may qualify as an attorney immediately following graduation from law school. After July 1, however, a six months' clerkship in a law office will be required of all candidates seeking the right to practice in New York State, the clerkship to be served following the bar examination. By this rule the court believes two desirable ends will be attained: the person licensed to practice law will have received practical experience in the conduct of a law office, and the committee on character and fitness, without whose certification admission to the bar is not granted, will have recourse to information from practicing lawyers with whom the applicant has been in close contact over the period.

Internship is fundamentally important in the American system of medical training. Through the years it has proved its value. Internship in law, as contemplated by the New York Court of Appeals, should prove equally beneficial. Its functioning will be watched critically, in the hope that it will make possible the weeding out of undesirables.

GEORGE WASHINGTON MEMORIAL.

Thousands of Americans were impressed with the speech delivered over the radio last night by Charles E. Hughes, former Secretary of State. His subject was the George Washington Memorial, the foundations of which, built some years ago in Washington, lie neglected. The association, under the direction of which the foundations were constructed, lately revived the project for completing the memorial, and it was in behalf of this project that Mr. Hughes spoke.

In a letter addressed to Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, president of the George Washington Memorial Association, Chief Justice Taft calls attention to the fact that three years hence it is proposed to celebrate with appropriate ceremony the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, and asks: "Is it possible that the occasion will find the great and beautiful city that bears his name unready for the ceremony?" What is needed, says Mr. Taft, "is a great, beautiful building that shall not only be a triumph in architecture worthy of him, but a structure which shall be a model auditorium, a spacious and comfortable place for the gathering and seating of thousands of Washington's countrymen, reminding them constantly of the wonderful treasure they have in his example. We have the site. We have the foundations of the building. It would be bad enough if we had no structure at all. It would be a glaring omission. But worse, far worse, would it be if all that we should have would be humiliating evidence of effort made to honor the real father of our country and ignominious failure."

Mr. Hughes, in his speech, said that it will take from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 at once to proceed with the work of erecting the structure so that its facilities will be available for the bicentennial celebration in 1932. He said further that in order to make the project representative of the entire American people, the association asks for donations of from $1 upward. This worthy cause deserves the support of the American people.

A "DIE-HARD" TRIUMPH.

In the London Times of February 5 there appeared a letter, signed by the Duke of Northumberland, by Lord Carson of Duncairn, by Lord Danesfort, and by four members of the house of commons, in which the grievances of the Southern Irish Loyalists were emphatically set forth. It was there pointed out that, after the truce of July 11, 1921, the British government withdrew from southern Ireland the protection of its police and troops; that that withdrawal was followed by a series of very grave outrages and injuries to person and property inflicted on Southern Irish Loyalists; that successive British governments pledged themselves to pay these sufferers fair compensation; that fair compensation in each case was fixed by an impartial tribunal; but that every payment exceeding £1,000 was docked by 40 per cent by the present administration. The letter concluded thus:

> We would draw attention to the grave injustice and hardship which the decision of the government inflicts on these unhappy people who have suffered so acutely. Many of them are dependent on the payment of the balance of their award to free themselves from debt and so re-establish their businesses. The result will be bankruptcy for many of them. These people gave their all in support of the British government against the forces of rebellion, and suffered every kind of loss, cruelty, and outrage. It is not only the question of the honor of the British government which is involved, but the honor of the nation, and we appeal to the public to insist that the amount of the recommendations made by the government committee be paid in full without further delay or limitation.

To those even slightly "in the know" the publication of such a letter at such a juncture was the appearance of a veritable stormy petrel in British politics. The sentiments it expressed awakened a responsive echo in the hearts of the old "die-hards," who are so numerous among the supporters of the Baldwin administration. The administration itself harkened to the cry to the extent of proposing on Tuesday last an appropriation of £70,000 for the purpose indicated, but that amount was regarded as so parsimonious and inadequate that Col. John Gretton, die-hard leader and one of the signers of the letter, being debarred by the rules from moving an increase, moved instead a decrease by £10. This contemptuous motion let loose a flood of invective against the administration from its own supporters. In vain did Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, explain that 283 Irish Loyalists have already received more than £750,000 in compensation; in vain did he declare that there are other worthy causes; in vain did he flatly refuse to increase the amount. Feeling ran so high that the Conservative administration was about to be defeated on a money bill and probably turned out of office.

Now, a humiliation like that, on the eve of a general election, would have a most disastrous effect on the prospects of the party, and so the dismayed whips sent in hot haste for Prime Minister Baldwin himself, who arrived from Downing Street breathless on the floor of the house. In view of the expressions of opinion reported to him, he moved to "report progress" on the bill and "to ask leave to sit again," a proposition which was adopted, and the danger was thereby, temporarily at least, averted.

The incident involved, to a certain extent but not perhaps a very serious extent, the setting aside of the authority of the chancellor of the exchequer. It also showed how doughty, tough, and uncompromising a champion of a cause Col. Gretton can be, and what a power can be exercised in a legislative body at a crisis by even a small band of determined men sincerely united by a common sentiment. To bring the incident to a happy conclusion required only Minister Baldwin's action of yesterday, when he announced that southern Irish Loyalists would be paid in full for damages sustained in disturbances there.

THE JAPANESE BEETLE

Statement of Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chief of plant quarantine and control administration, Department of Agriculture, on February 7, before the House committee on appropriations. Hon. Will R. Wood chairman.

The spread of the Japanese beetle increases the work for the control of that pest, increases the territory to be covered and increases the number of nursery establishments that have to be inspected in order that their products may be certified for shipment throughout the United States. That work will be greatly increased because of the spread during last summer of the beetle into new nursery establishments. It also involves work at certain outlying points, notably Washington City. This Japanese beetle is in Washington now. It is also within the city limits of Baltimore, but the cost of control there will be met by Maryland. In the District of Columbia any control work is solely a Federal job.

Mr. Wood—What does this beetle do in the District?

Dr. Marlatt—It will do here what it has done in New Jersey and in eastern Pennsylvania. It is a very destructive insect to lawns, to grass in parks, to places of public amusement, such as playgrounds, golf courses, and so forth, and to pastures where the grass is more or less closely cropped. In that way it may affect a larger number of people than almost any other insect pest.

Mr. Wood—Does this beetle destroy trees and lawns in Japan as it does here?

Dr. Marlatt—No, sir. It is comparatively harmless in Japan.

Mr. Wood—Then, why is it destructive here and not destructive there?

Dr. Marlatt—There are two reasons. The fundamental reason, of course, is that it is a native of Japan, and in the course of centuries there has grown up a natural control, through parasites, diseases and other natural agents. Then, there is the further reason that agriculture over much of Japan is so intensive that grass areas in which the insect could breed are exceptional and very limited. They cultivate every little patch of ground, even as large as this table, planting it to rice or some other food crop. With us, in contrast, private lawns, public parks, golf links and everything of that sort encourage the enormous development of the pest. These beetles can be collected in New Jersey by the hundreds of bushels.

Mr. Wood—What is the process of counteracting these insects?

Dr. Marlatt—That has been the subject of study for a number of years, and material progress has been made in that direction, but no simple and easy means of controlling this insect has been found. It is almost impossible to kill it by spraying with poisons. In the first place, there are too many of them. And then, to use a common expression, it is a "wise bird." It eats a little of a poisoned leaf, for instance, gets sick, and stops. It does not go back to a poisoned tree, and it gets well of that sickness as a rule. It does not eat enough at the first feeding to kill it, so it is very difficult to reach it by poison. We can keep it from trees to a certain extent by applying poison. The poison will drive it away from trees, but that simply means that you have shifted the damage somewhere else.

Mr. Wood—Can it be controlled by fumes?

Dr. Marlatt—No, sir; we have no fumigant that could kill it. It is a very active insect and flies around as rapidly as a honeybee. If you shake a small tree they will form quite a cloud around the tree while they are in the air. They are very active on bright, warm days. We have various means of control. There is, in the first place, the soil control for it in the grub stage, which, however, is very expensive. The best means of getting at it, perhaps, is by the use of traps, and that is what we will do in Washington. Our investigators have discovered that an extract of geranium, called geraniol, is very attractive to these beetles. The use of these traps is one of the most interesting things I have seen in connection with the work on this insect. I went through some orchards last August and saw these traps in operation between every square of four trees. They consist of a device of tin against which the beetles fly, causing them to fall into a fruit jar or other receptacle that is fastened underneath. At the top of the trap is placed a small sponge saturated with this geraniol, and the odor is carried by the wind. The beetle flies toward the odor, coming to the traps against the wind.

I have seen those jars after a day's exposure with almost a quart of beetles in each of them. When caught by means of these traps they can readily be destroyed. However, where they are as abundant as they are in portions of New Jersey, even with such enormous collections as are possible through the employment of traps, collectors in individual premises—i. e., not general—do not get enough of them to make much difference. However, in the District of Columbia, with the invasion just beginning and where they can not be replaced from the outside, we hope that these traps will prove effective.

New York Herald Tribune: Sir Robert Thomas, member of parliament, wants the house of commons to insist upon a Welsh-speaking postmaster for the village of Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndropyllllandysilliogogogoch, and one is tempted to suggest that the town needs a Welsh-speaking town council as well, to discuss the question of simplified spelling in Wales.

The same equivalent could be found in 5,000 acres of cornstalks. If every one of Martin County's 451,000 acres were planted to corn and produced a heavy crop of stalks, they would provide the paper for one big newspaper to run 90 days. The county's cornstalks could, however, produce ample paper for the publication needs of all its newspapers.

Atchison Daily Globe: In a certain African tribe is a well-enforced rule that states that an orator, while addressing an assembly, must stand on one leg only. If he becomes tired, and must change legs, his speech ends then and there. We see a good deal of common sense in that African custom, and humbly urge that it be adopted in this country—at least in Topeka, Kans.

Democracy's Job.

Indianapolis News: "We must convince the electorate," declares Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky, "that we are a majority party." Which, considering the way the electorate has voted at the last three national elections, will require some doing.

Add Automobiles.

Indianapolis Star: Automobiles killed 27,000 in this country in 1928, which indicates that Sherman's remark about war should be amended.

Do They Learn It?

Detroit News: After a thoughtful woman has been married a certain time, she has learned to hang a clothesline in the basement in winter in such a way that it will invariably catch an unsuspecting male across the Adam's apple.

Or Just Love.

The Best Book.

Ohio State Journal: If we had to be cast away on a desert island with only one book we believe we'd take The World Almanac along, if only to give it the trip in gratitude for favors received.

The Silver Lining.

Richmond Register: Oklahoma can at least derive comfort from the fact that while her legislatures are occupied with the regular pastime of impeaching the governor no new laws are being passed.

As Ever.

Ohio State Journal: About all our leading industries now have their new tariff schedules all written out and ready for enactment except, of course, the ultimate consumer industry, which doesn't count.

So Sweetly.

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle: 'Tis the season when lame ducks sing swan songs.

Wholesale Center.

Indianapolis News: Now that Chicago gangsters have taken to killing their rivals in half-dozen lots, the quiet city on the lake can establish further claims to prominence as a wholesale center.

There's an Issue.

Los Angeles Times: If the Democrats want a burning issue in the next campaign let them come out strong for a deep slash in the cover charges at the night clubs.

Those Who Talked of Flying Were Dreamers Until Men Flew.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

"THE last Christian," said the mad German philosopher, "died on the cross."

Good people condemn him for saying it, and yet it contains the half-truth common to epigrams.

The philosophy taught by Jesus doesn't work, but it doesn't work for the simple reason that men will not practice it.

Men do not love their enemies; they do not turn the other cheek; they do not give to those who ask; they do not practice unselfishness.

Does their failure to practice these virtues prove the philosophy unsound?

Is honesty any less desirable because men steal?

When Jesus was confronted by shrewd enemies who asked questions to trap him, his answers revealed a crystal-clear common sense.

Because of those answers, the world says: "Here was a man with a level head and shrewd wit, who could take care of himself."

But when Jesus taught men to regard material things of no value, to become as little children and to love one another, the world answered and still answers: "He is a dreamer and his teachings do not fit the hard facts of a practical world."

Was he a teacher of common sense in one instance and a dreamer of dreams in the other?

Isn't it possible that his "dreams" were the soundest of common sense?

The world has made a rather dreary mess of its practical, selfish, survival-of-the-fittest theories.

Even now it is arming for another great war—the perfect flower of a selfish philosophy.

The good works man has done are the works of unselfishness; the evil he has done is the work of lust for gain.

If men have done some good by harmonizing their lives in some degree with the philosophy of Jesus, isn't it possible that their lives and works would be wholly good if they should adopt his philosophy entire?

A few can not live the Christian philosophy and survive, any more than one nation can disarm and survive.

But if all would cleanse themselves of selfishness, none would lose for none would wish to gain.

None would need to turn the other cheek, for none would strike the first blow.

None would lose by his willingness to give, for none would be so selfish as to take.

The fault is not in the philosophy, but in man's failure to adopt it.

If the philosophy of Jesus is foolish, then wars, greed the exploiting of the weak and the arrogant cruelty of the strong are sensible.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Abandoning Speed Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here are just a few ideas in regard to your editorial in The Post of February 11, headed "Traffic Speed and Safety." They refer principally to certain characteristics of the motor car which, unlike the general public, are under the control of the designer.

Sooner or later speed laws will be abandoned for the simple reason that it is impossible to enforce them. The only effective way to limit speed would be to control the maximum power of the vehicle. As it is, the District, in effect, says to a car owner, "Here are your tags for your 60, 70 or 80 mile an hour car, but you must not drive it faster than 30 miles an hour." This is about as effective as giving a piece of candy to a child and telling him to eat only half of it.

Manufacturers usually make quite a point of speed and power, but they do not always emphasize the opposite factor—stopping power. Cars can not keep going all the time; for every start there must be a stop. Rapid acceleration or "pick-up," as it is generally called, is not so important as rapid deceleration or stopping power. An increase in the former power without a corresponding increase in the latter factor not only invites but insures danger of accident. In fact, it may be said that stopping power is more important than "pick-up," because the driver is more often forced to stop suddenly to avoid danger from ahead than he is to start suddenly to avoid danger from the rear. Rapid acceleration is much less valuable as a safety feature than is rapid retardation. The former partakes more of the nature of a time saver than an accident saver, whereas the latter is primarily a safety feature and as such should be as efficient and as powerful as it is possible to make it.

As the retarding force is applied by the friction of the tires on the road, its maximum value can not be increased beyond the limits determined by such frictional values. It would seem good policy to utilize as much of this maximum force as possible, yet the manufacturers are given free hand to use as much of it as they see fit regardless of the accelerating power supplied. Some use about the maximum, around 80 per cent of it; some about 60 per cent and some about 40 per cent. One car capable of 70-odd miles per hour may use 40 per cent and another capable of 50-odd miles per hour may use 80 per cent.

Very occasionally one sees a car on the streets make a very quick and sudden stop, showing that the brake equipment is capable of giving about the maximum stopping power, and the owner has had his brakes carefully adjusted to give such power. More often, however, this is not the case. Owners are very keen about the speed characteristics of their vehicles, but stopping power is an uninteresting and confusing matter which they pass on to the service station. Even the manufacturers do not understand the subject any too well, as they put out brake systems that are not properly equalized. In fact, it may be truthfully said that there are no equalized brake mechanisms in use on any car, when it is considered that equalization of the braking action is the only kind that amounts to anything. They spend good money, however, to equalize the driving action of the engine, but fail to see that driving ahead action and retarding action are the same in character except that the former action is one of speeding up and the latter one of slowing down. As the mathematician would say—they are the same in value except one has a plus sign and the other a minus sign in front of it.

It is probable that the year 1940 will see 100-mile-an-hour cars, and that such speed will be possible of use on speedways. Anything short of the maximum possible stopping power for such speeds would be criminal, and this means that brakes must be self-equalizing and self-adjusting, so that at no time during the use of such speed would it be possible to lose any part of this maximum braking power. Such a requirement is not impossible nor unreasonable, and the public should demand it.

Broadcast Of Big Fight Is Held Dim

Only Sell-Out in Advance of Sharkey-Stribling Affair to Cause Dempsey to Permit Microphone in Miami Arena.

Although some one may step in at the last minute and save the day for the fans unable to attend, the prospects for broadcasting the Sharkey-Stribling fight at Miami Beach next Wednesday appear very uncertain.

Needless to add, the chains are making every effort to cover the event and will keep at it until the very hour of the fight if they are not successful in securing the broadcasting concession sooner.

Before his death Tex Rickard was quoted as saying that in the future no fights which he promoted would be broadcast, and Jack Dempsey, apparently following this injunction has not, so far as is known, made any arrangements for the installation of microphones.

Station WSMG, in New York City, owned by the Madison Square Garden Corporation, which frequently broadcasts bouts, is not physically equipped to take the fight from Miami Beach. A ray of hope for the radio fans would be a sell-out or advance assurance that the fight would be a success, in which case it is believed the management, having no fear the box office might be hurt, might yield to overtures made by the radio people.

Doubtless Washington listeners will be pleased to learn that Norman Brokenshire, formerly of WRC, and one of the most popular announcers here, will again be frequently heard in the Capital. Mr. Brokenshire, attached to the staff of WCAU in Philadelphia, is now one of the head announcers for Columbia. His familiar deep voice was heard announcing the pre-inaugural broadcasts here last week and he will be back again to do the honors at the inauguration.

There were only two announcers at the last inauguration, Graham McNamee, for WCAP and the American Telegraph & Telephone Co. stations, and Norman Brokenshire for WRC and the Radio Corporation stations. The broadcasting of the Coolidge inauguration was termed a remarkable thing because 21 stations carried it. However, the number this year will be more than 100.

Then there were six microphones, next week there will be a bank of more than 30. Where this year preparations have been made weeks in advance, the radio part of it was not so well worked out when Mr. Coolidge was sworn in. Brokenshire, talking almost extemporaneously, excepting for such information as he was able to gather hastily from guidebooks and other handy sources of information, was required to be on the air almost two hours before the actual ceremonies began. A life saver for him was the Marine Band which played intermittently.

Even at that time, however, Brokenshire was a veteran as an announcer. He had announced the memorable Democratic National Campaign in Madison Square Garden in 1924 and in December of the same year he was assigned to cover the Wilson memorial services held in Washington by the Senate and the House.

Mayor Walker will appear in a special role in "Main Street," the radio presentation featured every Tuesday evening over Station WOR when he returns from his vacation in Florida.

"The mayor has agreed to take part in one of our Main Street sketches and will greet the mayor of Titusville," Lawrence Cox, program manager of WOR, said in New York. "I received a letter from his secretary today agreeing to this novel feature as soon as he gets back from the South."

What Today Means to You

FEBRUARY 23

"PISCES."

IF February 23 is your birthday, the most propitious hours for you today are from 10:15 a. m. to 11:15 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m., from 5:15 p. m. to 6:15 p. m., and from 9:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., and from 3 p. m. to 4:45 p. m.

The planetary aspects indicate that today will be marked by petty troubles and "peevishness." Only those with big and open minds will be able to avoid these dangers, and thereby reap a harvest of good.

The child born today will be very capable at whatever it attempts. It will mask its determination to succeed with a quiet and unassuming air. It will love all in its family and will be loyal and sincere in all relationships of life.

You are industrious, and there are not many hours of the day that find you unemployed. Yours is a temperament that can not rest idle while there is anything to do, no matter how menial and unimportant the task may be. You would make a splendid business man or business woman, as the smallest detail is accorded the same attention and care as you would give to life largest. You are a great believer in routine and efficiency, and apply, in so far as possible, these same principles to your private life. You have unbounded ability and if you are given half a chance you will advance far.

You are not very fond of travelling, except occasionally, and then it is rather because you like to feel you have visited certain places, than because you enjoy the time spent in visiting them. You are a home lover and probably a strong supporter of the words, "See America First." You are intensely patriotic, and can not understand any other attitude. You are slow to anger, but when you have stood things for a certain length of time, you suddenly retaliate and then your adversary finds out your true metal.

Your marital relations, although not of the finest, will be smooth and happy The stars portend that serious trouble will come to you in middle age, but will be defeated after a long and strenuous battle.

Successful people born on February 23:

Mrs. Emma Willard, educator.

Canine "Cyclone" Undone by Dreams

Ingersheim, Alsace, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Shepherds en route to market with a large flock of sheep were horrified one morning to find 145 of them dead. Nothing, they thought, but a cyclone could wreck such havoc—but there had been no storm. The sheep apparently bore no marks of violence, except for a few drops of blood near the throats of a few.

Then the shepherd found Billy, their German wolfhound, in a nearby stable and licking the wool from his teeth the "cyclone" was shot.

WORK'S BRIDGE

"The Auction Player unfamiliar with Contract is apt to be troubled by the big difference between Auction and Contract values for tricks, under-tricks, premiums, slams and rubbers, &c. The vulnerability feature of Contract is also apt to be confusing.

"As a pecial service to our readers, Mr. Work will be glad to send you upon request, complimentary, a complete statement explaining all these new features, provided you inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for his reply. Mr. Work also answers all Auction and Contract questions without charge."

Suit-bids of two in Contract show six reasonably sure tricks, two more than are announced by a one-bid; therefore the partner may jump a two-bid with much less strength than needed to jump a one-bid. The six tricks announced by the two-bid must be reasonably sure even if the partner should shift to No Trump or another suit.

I believe it to be a great mistake to insist (as some do) that a two-bid must not be made without strength in three suits. The important thing is that the six tricks be there.

Sound Two Bids.

	(1)	(2)
Spades:	A-K-x-x-x	A-K-Q-x
Hearts:	A-Q-x	A-K-x-x
Diamonds:	A-x-x	A-x-x-x
Clubs:	x-x-x	x
	(3)	(4)
Spades:	A-Q-J-x-x	A-K-Q-J-x-x
Hearts:	A-K-J	K-x-x
Diamonds:	x-x-x	x-x
Clubs:	x-x	x-x

Unsound Two Bids.

	(5)	(6)
Spades:	A-K-x-x-x	A-K-Q-x
Hearts:	A-Q-x	A-Q-x
Diamonds:	x-x-x	x-x-x
Clubs:	x-x	x-x-x
	(7)	(8)
Spades:	A-Q-J-x-x	A-K-Q-J-10
Hearts:	A-Q-10	K-x-x
Diamonds:	x-x-x	x-x-x
Clubs:	x-x	x-x

For the sake of uniformity, Spade bids are shown in all the above hands; however, with similar holdings in Hearts, the bidding would be the same. The identical principle would prevail with a Minor suit unless the bidder were using the two-bid of a Minor to show a two-suiter. Using that convention, Minor bids would have to be either one or three; one being bid with the same holdings with which one of a Major is named, and three with hands good for seven tricks.

Each of Hands 1 to 4 should be started with a two-bid as each almost surely will take six tricks either with Spades the trump, at No Trump, or even should the partner shift to another suit. Should such a shift not fit the original bidder's hand, he still could insure himself the estimated number of tricks by bidding No Trump or rebidding his suit.

Hands 5 to 8 are not good for six tricks but are good for at least four with Spades the trump, and contain two quick tricks; they should be bid one Spade.

(Next Friday and Saturday this subject will be continued, and illustration will be given of suit-bids of three and four. This will be followed with a full explanation of jumps by the partner of the suit bidder.)

Sargent to Speak on Air Tonight

Attorney General Will Be Given Banquet by Bar. Radio Symphony at 9 P. M.—Old Popular Song Guessing at 8.

Attorney General John G. Sargent will be the speaker in a program broadcast at 11 o'clock tonight from the Mayflower Hotel. The occasion is a testimonial dinner in honor of the Attorney General given by the Federal Bar Association.

Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, will direct a radio symphony of Bach, Mendelssohn, and Tschaikowsky compositions in the General Electric Hour at 9 o'clock, through Station WRC.

In addition to the classical selections, Sokoloff will conduct three colorful pieces by Rimsky-Korsakow, Delibes and Ambroise Thomas, including "Song of India," the "Waltz" from the ballet "Coppelia" and the "Mignon" overture. In the same program will be heard the lofty patriotic "Finlandia," a symphonic poem by Sibelius.

Commemorative of Washington's Birthday, well known patriotic airs will be featured with popular dance music during the Lucky Strike Dance Hour at 10 o'clock tonight. These spirited melodies, blending with the occasion, include "Spirit of Independence" and the famous "Washington Post" march.

There will be the usual group of waltz tunes including "Remember" and "Love's Dream After the Ball," as well as a revue of Gilbert and Sullivan waltzes.

Among the current hits are "You're the Cream in My Coffee," "Makin' Whoopee," "I'm Bringing a Red, Red Rose" and "Bye-Bye, Blackbird."

Richard Maxwell, tenor, will be featured in the program by the Parnassus Trio to be broadcast at noon today. "The Winter," by Rogers; Bagby's "Alone," and "Dawn Brought Me Love and You" are listed among his solos.

The RCA demonstration hour will be broadcast at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The White House dinner music program at 6:30 o'clock follows: White House waltz. "Polonaise Militaire" (Chopin), "Valse Bluette" (Drigo), "Once in a Lifetime," "Die Walkure" (Wagner), "Irish Rhapsody" (Herbert), "Simple Aveu" (Thome), and "In the Hall of the Mountain King" (Grieg).

A memory contest which will introduce the popular songs of yesterday will be featured in the weekly organ recital by Lew White, at 8 o'clock, from WRC. The radio audience will be asked to guess the titles of each song Mr. White will play, and at the end of each selection the announcer will give the title.

Station WMAL will broadcast a regular Washington night program, with but few Columbia Broadcasting System features. Addresses seem to predominate, with four or five scheduled on different subjects, including the inaugural charity ball, a new musical center plan by the municipal architect of the District of Columbia and "Industrial Leadership."

The Brunswick Saturday Nighters and the Everglade Orchestra are among the dance organizations on the schedule

The Tuesday Evening Musical Club, under the direction of Mrs. Florence Howard, will give a 45-minute recital from WMAL, at 9 o'clock.

Station WJSV will broadcast its regular Saturday evening radio revue and barn dance program at 9:15 o'clock tonight.

A program of varied entertainment by the staff of station WOL will be the offering at 6 o'clock. A dance program will be put on the air between 10 o'clock and midnight.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN.

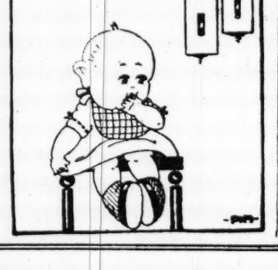
FEBRUARY 23.

MARGARET DELAND, the famous novelist and magazine writer, was born this day, 1857. She is best known for her stories about Dr. Lavender and his circle of villagers. Her best books include "John Ward, Preacher," "The Hands of Esau," "Around Old Chester," "Promises of Alice," "Small Things" and "The Vehement Flame."

Words for that old favorite song, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," were written by Emma Willard, born this day, 1787. Her greatest work, however, was as a pioneer for American women. Her achievements in this field include the founding of several schools for girls. In 1814 she submitted to Gov. Clinton of New York a manuscript, "A Plan for Improving Female Education," which found much favor. There is a statue of her in Troy, N. Y.

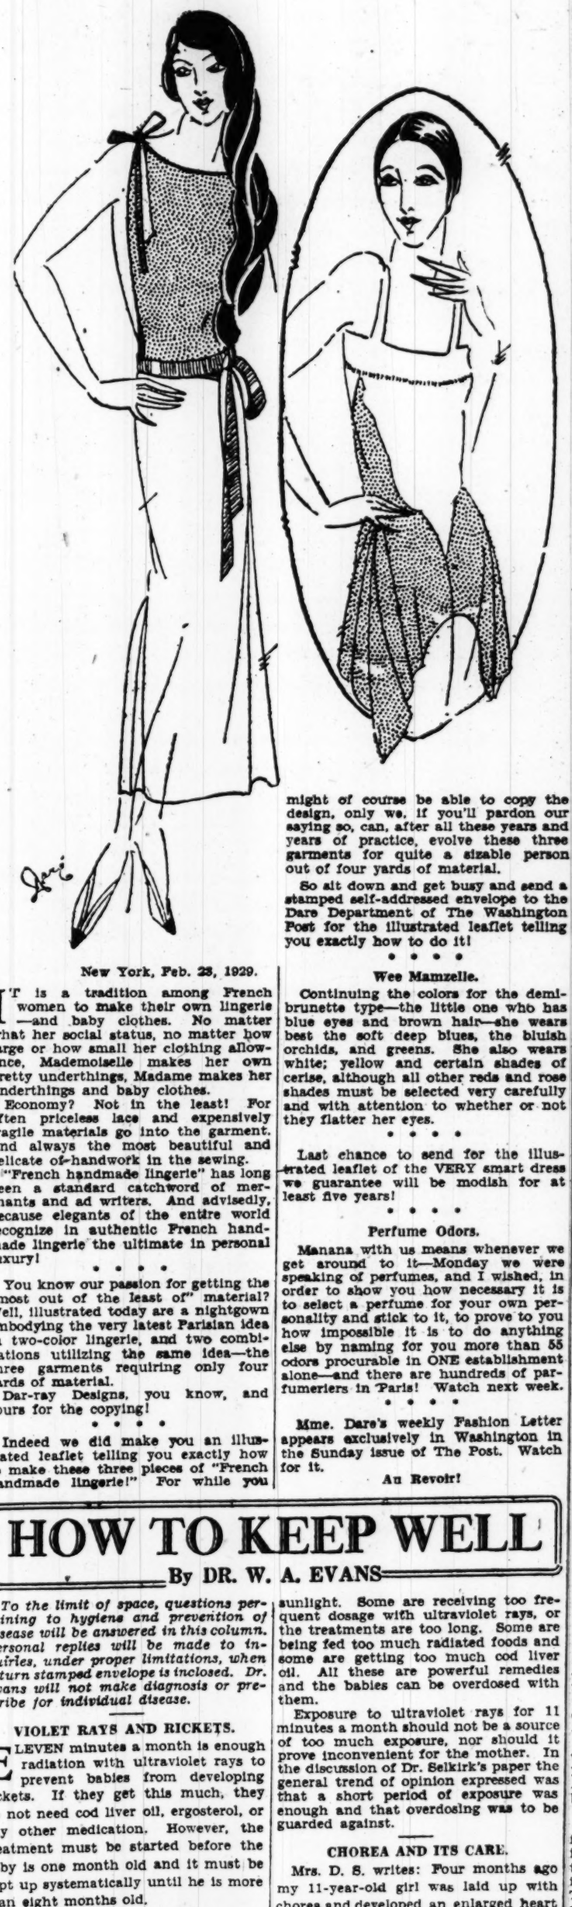
Sophie Schroder, the famous German actress, was born this day, 1781.

Baby Mine



Dare Interprets the Mode

You can make them yourself—a nightgown and two combinations embodying the very latest Parisian idea in two-color lingerie. (Dah-ray Designs).



New York, Feb. 23, 1929.

IT is a tradition among French women to make their own lingerie —and baby clothes. No matter what her social status, no matter how large or how small her clothing allowance, Mademoiselle makes her own pretty underthings, Madame makes her underthings and baby clothes.

Economy? Not in the least! For often priceless lace and expensively fragile materials go into the garment. And always the most beautiful and delicate of handwork in the sewing.

"French handmade lingerie" has long been a standard catchword of merchants and ad writers. And advisedly, because elegants of the entire world recognize in authentic French handmade lingerie the ultimate in personal luxury!

• • • •

You know our passion for getting the "most out of the least of" material? Well, illustrated today are a nightgown embodying the very latest Parisian idea in two-color lingerie, and two combinations utilizing the same idea—the three garments requiring only four yards of material.

• • • •

Indeed we did make you an illustrated leaflet telling you exactly how to make these three pieces of "French handmade lingerie!" For while you might of course be able to copy the design, only we, if you'll pardon our saying so, can, after all these years and years of practice, evolve these three garments for quite a sizable person out of four yards of material.

So sit down and get busy and send a stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet telling you exactly how to do it!

Wee Mamzelle.

Continuing the colors for the demi-brunette type—the little one who has blue eyes and brown hair—she wears best the soft deep blues, the bluish orchids, and greens. She also wears white; yellow and certain shades of cerise, although all other reds and rose shades must be selected very carefully and with attention to whether or not they flatter her eyes.

• • • •

Last chance to send for the illustrated leaflet of the VERY smart dress we guarantee will be modish for at least five years!

• • • •

Perfume Odors.

Manana with us means whenever we get around to it—Monday we were speaking of perfumes, and I wished, in order to show you how necessary it is to select a perfume for your own personality and stick to it, to prove to you how impossible it is to do anything else by naming for you more than 55 odors procurable in ONE establishment alone—and there are hundreds of perfumeriers in Paris! Watch next week.

Mme. Dare's weekly Fashion Letter appears exclusively in Washington in the Sunday issue of The Post. Watch for it.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

VIOLET RAYS AND RICKETS.

ELEVEN minutes a month is enough radiation with ultraviolet rays to prevent babies from developing rickets. If they get this much, they do not need cod liver oil, ergosterol, or any other medication. However, the treatment must be started before the baby is one month old and it must be kept up systematically until he is more than eight months old.

Dr. Selkirk and his associates came to this conclusion as the result of treating and watching nearly 400 babies in Cincinnati. The experiment extended over a 20-month period. To begin with, they would expose a baby for two minutes at a time—the front of the body one minute and the back for a similar time. The treatments were gradually extended until the total exposure at a sitting was ten minutes—five of the front and five of the rear of the body. These treatments were given twice a week. The children were watched for clinical symptoms of rickets and their bones were examined with X-rays.

They presently came to the conclusion that this was too much treatment. By experimenting back and forth they finally decided that eleven minutes a month was enough for the average baby. With that amount a few became rickety, but the number was small.

This amount given systematically was enough. More than that was harmful. Reports that the use of rickets preventing procedures can be overcome are coming from many parts of the world. Many warnings against overtreatment are being sent out. Some babies are being left too long in the sunlight. Some are receiving too frequent dosage with ultraviolet rays, or the treatments are too long. Some are being fed too much radiated foods and some are getting too much cod liver oil. All these are powerful remedies and the babies can be overdosed with them.

Exposure to ultraviolet rays for 11 minutes a month should not be a source of too much exposure, nor should it prove inconvenient for the mother. In the discussion of Dr. Selkirk's paper the general trend of opinion expressed was that a short period of exposure was enough and that overdosing was to be guarded against.

CHOREA AND ITS CARE.

Mrs. D. S. writes: Four months ago my 11-year-old girl was laid up with chorea and developed an enlarged heart and liver. She is still in bed, running a temperature of 100 to 101 and pulse 120.

Can she be cured only by staying in bed at home, or is there anything else I can do for her?

REPLY.

It is imperative that you keep the child under a physician's care and in bed.

Chorea with that amount of fever, an enlarged heart, and a pulse of 120 is a serious matter.

UNDERARM PERSPIRATION.

J. L. writes: Please publish a remedy for excessive perspiration under the arms. I have ruined any number of dresses from this cause, and I would certainly appreciate any information you can furnish to remedy the cause. I am not the nervous type, nor do I suffer from any physical faults. Every day of my life (I am in the late twenties) has been enjoyed by perfect health. I am inclined to be stout.

REPLY.

The remedies sold in the drug stores are as good as any. They are safe, as a rule, if properly used.

JELLEFF'S

Uncle Ray's Corner

A Little Saturday Talk.

A LONG and newsy letter from a 12-year-old Corner reader brings up the subject of reading. Here is the letter, with part left out to save space:

"Dear Uncle Ray: I really love to read books. I just can't leave them alone. Mother said I read too much. I told myself one day that I would never read another book. But five seconds afterward I was sitting in a corner and reading. I really just adore books. Unless they are bad, they don't do me any harm. Why shouldn't I read when I have time to? Hoping this letter reaches you safe and happy, your loving friend,

LAURA NICKSE."

I sympathize with you, Laura, because during my boyhood I liked to read a great deal. Sometimes I read stories of adventure, sometimes books of history.

If you choose good books to read, they can become your friends and can help you to grow richer in mind and knowledge.

There is a point, however, beyond which it is not wise to go in our reading. If we read "morning, noon and night," we are likely to find our brain aching and our body not growing so well as it ought.. Fresh air and play are important for building good health.

If we strain our eyes too much, they will trouble us sooner or later if we do not build good health while we are young, our later lives will not be so pleasant.

As I look back on my boyhood I am glad that I mixed outdoor sport with my reading. During summer vacations I played baseball or went swimming almost every day.

There is another reason to limit our reading. If we read too much, the things we read may get jumbled up in our memory. A good book deserves careful reading, and a space of time to think about it afterward.

So I say to Laura, and to all other readers, "Make good books your friends. Read often, in many fields; but limit your reading so that you will get the most enjoyment out of the books you choose, and so that you will have time for outdoor games and play."

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.
The Parent Counselor.

Go-Getting By Plodding.

DEAR JOHN: In your last letter you say "What's the use of plodding along when the go-getters get everything?" Then you tell me that only a short time ago a movie magnate was selling furs, owner of a chain of amusement houses rose out of a cheap little show house, and still a third was once a glove salesman.

You are all fussed up over this success business. You get excited every time you hear that a one-time $15-a-week clerk is now the owner of a skyscraper or a chain of restaurants. Then you want to chuck your books, change your vocational ideals, modify your line of action and join the Go-Getters.

Mighty glad, John, that you want to be a go-getter; that is, assuming that you know even the first principles about this go-and-get business.

You've got to go in order to get and after you get you'll have to keep on going in order to continue your getting.

Before you start to make sure of what you want to get, and, please John, be quite sure that you will be satisfied after you get it.

Even more important, you'd better study just what kind of GO there is in you. You see, my boy, there are go-getters who can make the lady of the house sign on the dotted line for a book she doesn't want. This type would have difficulty selling bonds to a first-class bank where a little of the plodder's patience, skill, brains and tact would be necessary.

When you were a boy I remember that you were given ten tickets to sell for a church entertainment. You sold only two and bought the rest yourself rather than turn them back. As a book agent you would let a woman slam the door in your face. You are a plodder, John, and a go-getter, too.

"How come?" you ask. You are out to get success (and you'll get it), but you are going to plod along to get it. And after all that is the surest and best way.

Let me tell you a little story:

The first student admitted to Stanford University came down from Oregon in the middle of the summer before the first term started. He was deficient in entrance credits and had no money. The university found him a job, driving a buggy and looking after a cow at a neighboring girls' school. The boy took his pay in being tutored.

He made good progress in everything but English composition and was finally admitted on his prospects. He studied geology and developed a genius for organization in student affairs. When he came up for graduation as a mining engineer he was still deficient in certain minor technicalities of English composition. But he was a great plodder and had prospects.

However, as he seemed to have all the other requirements of a useful citizen, he was allowed to graduate and take his chances in the world.

The boy's name was Herbert C. Hoover.

I have just dug into the lives of 16 actors, 24 architects, 120 authors, 6 economists, 36 educators, 17 engineers, 38 explorers, 21 financiers, 30 inventors, 24 journalists, 28 medical scientists, 31 musicians, 17 philanthropists, 43 scientists and 52 statesmen to discover whether or not they were go-getters in the present very superficial sense or plodders in the big broad old-fashioned sense.

I find, John, that every one of these men "got there" by hard work, intensive study and high ideals of their job.

Scrape the sky, John, with your sky-scraping ambitions, but remember the higher the skyscraper the deeper must be the foundation.

Good luck to you,

YOUR OLD UNCLE DEAN.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.

A Family Party.

Mother insists I wear high shoes. She is wonderful and I suppose she knows best, but she doesn't always understand a girl's mind and what the girl is up against. What can I do?

GIRL OF FIFTEEN.

Answer—A girl who says she has a wonderful mother and writes with a sincerity similar to yours is walking on the right road, whether with high or low shoes. There are so many more important things in life than shoes—good manners, fine character, respect for one's self, vocational careers, and attitude toward life. Yet I know just how you feel. If I could be your wonderful father, mother and I would talk it over.

I can compromise any time on shoes, stockings, length of skirts, and powdering the nose, but I will never compromise on good taste, wholesome character and educational advantage. If I were your father I'd say to you, "Why not gently win your mother over by inviting her attention from time to time to the low shoes shown in the advertisements." When some woman whom your mother respects calls, make it a point later to remind mother that the guest wore low shoes.

You'll win, and in a nice way.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

"Thwarting First Love."

DEAR Miss McDonald: Regarding the proposition of first love, I think the important things for elders to realize is that never should first love be thwarted. This produces the condition of frustration that in turn produces the weakling, the woman hater, the love-coward, and all the other abominations we encounter in everyday life.

Love is a human necessity. It should be considered such. At the age when love dawns, nature is at work on a masterpiece. A rude jerk and the whole is ruined. Yet parents and guardians are always at hand to supply the jerk. When people through education become humane and enlightened in regard to the emotions of the young than there will be fewer spiritual and emotional tragedies as a result of first love.

Take this very question of the persistence of the first image. That is nature, reacting to shock. The boy sees his sweetheart snatched away he suffers that revulsion over and over unconsciously for years, and consciously the moment another woman produces in him the same stimulus as the lost sweetheart. He suffers his agony of loss and frustration over again and believes his unhappiness due to love for his first girl. That is not the case, but his conviction results in his relinquishing the second sweetheart. A second violent injury to his emotional system.

The emotional nature of a human being is a delicate mechanism, and one wonders how anyone can dare to do it violence. Yet we see in this day every form of violence offered it. Our institutions for the mentally ill stand as pitiful monuments to the vicious violence offered the emotional system through ignorance.

Some time ago I was tempted to write to The Post urging that they stand back of you in a certain suggestion made in your column. It was the very sane, if advanced, suggestion that the system of public education begin to educate. That they take cognizance of the real need of the young for enlightenment along the lines that would fit them to become the heads of happy and permanent homes. I take this opportunity to advocate that measure and to hope that through you and other wise young leaders the number of fatalities resulting from love and marriage, the number of wrecked homes, and wrecked minds might some day be less.

REMOVING ASQUITH'S BODY STIRS VILLAGE

Owners of Adjacent Graves Block Lady Oxford in Plan for Monument.

ANOTHER BODY IS IN WAY

London, Feb. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The Lady of Oxford and Asquith's plan to move the grave of Premier Asquith, her husband, in the five-century-old churchyard at Sutton Courtney a few feet from its present position, today resulted in something like revolt among the native villagers there.

After having obtained from the home "office the permission necessary for exhumation of the coffin, it was discovered that 'Margot's" plan would involve digging up another grave occupying the new site. After the local vicar was called in to attempt to mediate the dispute, the matter has now reached an impasse.

The countess' reason for desiring removal of the grave of the Lord of Oxford and Asquith is that the original location does not provide sufficient room for the erection of a stone memorial, designed by Lady Oxford herself.

But passionate objections have been raised by two remaining members of the Hermon family—a family which has lived in the village of Sutton Courtney for generations—Mrs. Dew and her brother, James Hermon.

Mrs. Dew, who lives in a thatched cottage close by the churchyard, today delivered a highly indignant outburst against Lady Oxford's proposal.

"I buried my father in that grave seventeen years ago," she said. "The little money my husband saved in the army I spent in giving father a decent funeral and a decent grave. Why should his bones be dug up to make room for Lord Oxford's coffin when there's room elsewhere in the church yard? I'm a very poor woman but I'll fight to the last penny to prevent his grave being molested.

"I buried my brother there 22 years ago. I hope to be buried there myself. I've told the vicar I'll never allow it. There shouldn't be one law for the rich and another for the poor, even in the grave."

C. J. Whiting, who has been parish clerk for 50 years, equally indignant, sides with Mrs. Dew. He declared today that the whole village is opposed to Lady Oxford.

Miss Morrow Sees Theatrical Benefit

Lindbergh's Fiancee, in Box, Makes First Appearance Since Engagement.

Mexico City, Feb. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Only a few persons recognized Miss Anne Spencer Morrow, fiancee of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, when she took a front chair in a box at the Teatro Fabregas last night. It was her first appearance in public since the announcement of her engagement.

The occasion was a benefit performance by Maria Tabau, popular Spanish artiste. The theater was packed. Miss Morrow gave close attention to the performance and appeared to be charmed with the singer's artistry.

The Morrow family today went to their home at Cuernavaca for the week-end.

Kellogg Peace Pact Ratified by Canada

Ottawa, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Without division the Canadian House of Commons this afternoon approved a motion providing for ratification of the Kellogg-Briand peace treaty.

Dublin, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The Dail, by a vote of 83 to 50, today approved a motion giving ratification to the government's signature on the Kellogg pact for the renunciation of war.

The motion was strongly opposed by the Republican wing, followers of Eamon de Valera. Speakers of this faction dubbed the pact a farce.

YOUR INCOME TAX

If property was acquired by gift after December 31, 1920, the basis is the same as it would be in the hands of the donor, or last preceding owner by whom it was not received by gift. For example, a man in 1921 bought stock in a corporation at $100 a share, kept it until January, 1922, when it was worth $120, and then gave it to his son, who in 1925 gave it to his wife, the stock then being worth $150 a share. If in 1928 the wife sold the stock for $200 a share, the taxable gain is not $50 but $100 a share, the gain over the cost to the preceding owner who did not acquire the stock by gift.

In computing the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property acquired by gift or transfer in trust on or before December 31, 1920, the basis is the fair market value of such property at the time of acquisition. For example, a taxpayer received in 1919 a gift of real estate having a fair market value of $10,000; he sold it in 1928 for $15,000. The original cost to the donor was $12,000. The taxable gain, however, is $5,000.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

AN ART EXPERT TESTIFIES ON MR. EIMER TWITCHELL'S "PORTRAIT OF A DISH OF FRUIT."

(Apropos Sir Joseph Duveen's testimony in the case of "La Belle Ferronniere.")

Q. Now, sir, what is your opinion of this painting?

A. It is not a genuine Twitchell; it is obviously a copy.

Q. How can you tell?

A. By the banana.

Q. Why by the banana?

A. The original Twitchell "Portrait of a Dish of Fruit" was a study of a dish containing three oranges, four apples, a bunch of grapes and a banana. In this painting the banana is simply not a Twitchell banana.

Q. It looks to me like a perfectly good banana. What's wrong with it?

A. It lacks depth. To me it is just a blotch and when I want bananas, I want bananas, not blotches. If you study it carefully you will see it is flat like a shoehorn. You naturally wouldn't want to reach into a dish of fruit for a banana and draw out a showhorn.

Q. How about the apples in this painting?

A. They do not look to me like Twitchell apples. They are too flabby. Mr. Twitchell was a great artist who painted nothing but grade A eating apples. The ones in this painting are cooking apples at best and very likely cider apples. The third apple from the end, reading from left to right, looks like a restaurant-applesauce apple.

Q. Look at the apple next to it. Is that not a very beautiful study, free from any flaw?

A. It strikes me as more like a tomato.

Q. And you don't care for tomatoes, I take it?

A. Well, that depends. Stewed tomatoes are not bad and my Aunt Jenny used to make a tomato salad that was. . . .

Q. Leave your Aunt Jenny out of this.

A. Very well, sir, but she could make a wonderful tomato salad whether I leave her out of this or not.

• • • •

Q. Let's get back to the evidence. Now what's wrong with those apples in this painting?

A. They have no feeling. I want to feel an apple.

Q. You're thinking of green apples, are you not? They're the feeling kind.

A. I am thinking of all apples. The apples in this painting are too fat. They have no structure. There is no mysticism.

Q. There is no mysticism in apples, is there?

A. If you have ever had any cider brandy you wouldn't ask such a foolish question.

• • • •

Q. Let us leave the apples and come to the oranges. Surely you have no criticism to offer to those, have you?

A. Are those oranges? I thought they were sweet potatoes.

Q. What gave you that idea?

A. They're too muddy for oranges.

Q. Let us take up the bunch of grapes. What have you to say of that?

A. They are not grapes; they are brussel sprouts. In a genuine Twitchell a grape was always a grape.

Q. What, then, is your verdict on this painting.

A. It is a rank imitation. The Twitchell painting was a study of a dish of fruit. This is a vegetable dinner.

Expert—Why not?

Scotch Colleges.

President Coolidge has been offered a professorship of thrift in a Scotch college. That must be the university where only one cheer is given for anything, three being considered an extravagance.

Speaking of Scotch colleges, L. H. G. says he knows one where an athlete has to win his letter 12 years to retain permanent possession and then has to will it back to the institution at his death.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE TWO WATCHES.

I have a watch, and so has he,
But mine is a watch which a friend gave me.
And the one he carries bears never a thought,
It's a thing he saw and one day bought.

His is a costlier watch than mine,
But it hasn't within it a friendly line
Engraved on the case, with date and name
Declaring the love from which it came.

His watch is jeweled and rich and rare
And fit to be worn by a millionaire.
But he bought it himself, as he buys his shoes
Or anything else which he wants to use.

There isn't a word on its golden case.
There isn't a memory he can trace.
His watch though shaped of the finest gold,
Is merely something that some one sold.

He has a watch and so have I,
But his is one which he chanced to buy,
And I think more of my watch than he,
Because from a friend it came to me.

Woman Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denver, Colo.—"I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and will take more. I am taking it as a tonic to help me through the Change of Life and I am telling many of my friends to take it as I found nothing before this to help me. I had so many bad feelings at night that I could not sleep and for two years I could not go down town because I was afraid of falling. My mother took the Vegetable Compound years ago with good results and now I am taking it during the Change of Life and recommend it."—Mrs. T. A. Miller, 1611 Adams Street, Denver, Colorado.

SAYS HE PERJURED SELF

Austin, Tex., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Augustus J. McCloskey, on trial here under election fraud charges involving the congressional race of the Fifteenth District in November, heard a former official associate charge him with connivance in alteration of returns late today. The trial is under way here on a change of venue from San Antonio.

Dave Dewhurst, assistant county clerk of Bexar County (San Antonio), testified that with the assistance and connivance of McCloskey, then county judge, he altered the returns from four precincts sufficiently to give McCloskey a plurality over Harry M. Wurzbach, Texas' only Republican representative in Congress.

Secretary Is Implicated.

Dewhurst testified that Charles Ramierez, formerly McCloskey's secretary, was with him when he made the alterations and that McCloskey, himself, had obtained the election returns that were altered.

Dewhurst said McCloskey declined to interest himself in the idea when the assistant clerk first proposed "to do something." Dewhurst then informed the county judge that there were rumors that Wurzbach had been "counted in" in about a dozen San Antonio boxes. Later McCloskey decided to obtain the necessary records from election officials and did get these from precincts 13, 16, 20 and 37, he added.

When it was found that McCloskey needed 165 or 176 votes to win, the county judge said, "If we can't get them all, don't bother to get any," Dewhurst added.

The witness said that tally sheets from one precinct were altered by substituting pages from other tally books and that the sheets removed were burned.

Witness Admits Perjury.

Dewhurst admitted under cross-examination that he had been promised immunity for his testimony. He further admitted that he had perjured himself in testifying before a court of inquiry in Bexar county. He said he did this "to protect my friends and myself as long as I could."

Dewhurst recited his testimony in such a rapid speech that he had to be warned to speak more slowly.

The crowd in the courtroom sat forward in intense silence as Dewhurst raced through his dramatic story, halting between questions and answers to puff at a cigarette.

Beat Woman and Left Her to Freeze, Is Charge

Beardstown, Ills., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Lyle Tuddy Todd, 22, was held without bond to await action of the Cass County grand jury this afternoon when a coroner's jury returned a verdict naming him a contributing cause of the death of Mrs. Katie Wilcox Petri, found frozen to death at the bottom of the Beardstown flood wall Wednesday.

A post-mortem examination resulted in a report to the jury that she had been "beaten into unconsciousness and then left on the levee, where she froze to death."

Todd was the last person seen with the dead woman, and is reputed to have said he "used his fist" on her.

London, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Surgeon Capt. Edward Atkinson, commander of the Antarctic expedition that found the bodies of Capt. Scott and his companions and brought back the records in 1912, died today at the age of 46. He served with the grand fleet in the war at Gallipoli and with the Howitzer Division in France, earning the D. S. O. and mention in dispatches with the latter section.

Luck Rolled Him $12, Boy Says; Theft Charged

New York, Feb. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Insisting he was neither a burglar nor a budding Baron Munchausen, Frank Perna, 17, of Richmond Hill, told the following story in Jamaica Court today, and stuck to it:

He was walking past Harry Weiser's butcher shop, in Richmond Hill, Thursday evening, when he slipped on an orange peel. He fell against the door of the shop and the door, although locked, gave way. As it swung in the door struck against the cash register, breaking it open. At the sight of the money Perna remembered that Weiser owed him $12 for running errands. So he took the $12.

Weiser gave police a slightly different version. He said $36 was missing and he denied owing the young man a penny. Magistrate Georgio held Perna in $2,000 bail for hearing next Wednesday.

JOHNSTON WITNESS CREATES LAUGHTER

Governor, Says Discharged Officer, Reemployed Him to Seek Bootleggers.

FORMER AUDITOR HEARD

Oklahoma City, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—A capitol policeman, who said he was discharged for alleged intoxication, testified today in the impeachment trial of Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor, that the chief executive later employed him to search for bootleggers at Shawnee. The testimony brought laughter from the spectators, and was the only bright incident in an otherwise dull day in the proceedings.

The policeman, C. A. Wallace, repeated his previous testimony that he had seen Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, confidential secretary to Johnston, enter the governor's office late at night through a second-story window.

Asked why he did not arrest Mrs. Hammonds for burglary, the former night watchman answered:

"I did not know I had a right to do so. I am a poor man and wanted to keep my position."

Wallace said he was discharged about eight months after that incident on the allegation that he had been intoxicated. Later the governor commissioned him on the bootlegger search, he said.

Over objections from defense counsel, W. B. Graham, former auditor for the State highway department, declared it was the policy of the administration "to destroy all persons who opposed it politically."

Virtually all of today's testimony dealt with the activities of Johnston's subordinates, in an apparent effort to build up the house prosecutor's contention that the suspended official is incompetent to continue as governor.

Canada May Offer Russia Recognition

Premier King Tells Commons Government Plans Resuming Relations.

Ottawa, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The Canadian government is considering reestablishment of relations with Soviet Russia Premier Mackenzie King disclosed in the house of commons today.

The information came from the premier in reply to J. S. Woodsworth (Labor), Winnipeg North Center, who had asked whether Canada was taking any steps for resumption of relations in view of the favorable reports about Russia as published from Col. J. R. Mackie, of Pembroke.

The premier's brief answer was "I am unable to say more to my honorable friend than that the government is considering the matter."

Col. Thomas Cantley (Conservative), Pictou, inquired if the government was aware that Russian anthracite coal was being brought into Montreal, and Charles Stewart, minister of the interior, replied that inquiries were being made and an answer would be given in a few days.

New Nurse Is Added To Foch's Attendants

Paris, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Indications that his physicians still find the condition of Marshal Ferdinand Foch a matter of some worry was seen tonight in an announcement that another nurse has been added to his staff so that he is not alone for a moment.

Earlier it had been reported that the former generalissimo of the allied armies had made such good progress that his early removal to southern France for convalescence was looked for.

NATIONALISTS WIN CHINESE BATTLE

American cruiser Trenton is expected Sunday night.

This morning Chefoo was awakened by the sound of field guns and trench mortars which proved to be about 20 miles west of the city. The firing ceased at noon and advices were received that the revolting soldiers had been defeated and were being pushed back towards the west.

The dispatches said that the Nationalists numbered 7,000 and the revolters 26,000. The casualties were reported as 200 dead among the northerners and 100 among the Nationalists. About 300 prisoners were captured as well as thousands of rifles and fifteen machine guns.

There are numerous former soldiers of the northern Shantung army in the province, and these have been flocking from all directions to join Chang Tsung-Chang, their old commander. The revolters apparently were lacking in ammunition and organization, while the Nationalists were commanded by Lieu Chen-Nien, who is in charge of the Chefoo district and kept up the morale of his troops.

Because of the favorable strategic position of Ning Haichow, 20 miles southeast of Chefoo, the Nationalist forces have established a base there and are accumulating large quantities of supplies and some ammunition in case the revolters should succeed in carrying out a heavy advance.

In this event they are expected to pass southward of Chefoo to Ning Haichow without attempting to enter Chefoo for the present.

Peking, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Diplomatic reports of the fighting near Chefoo today said that Chang Tsung-Chang arrived at Teng Chow-Fu on Tuesday from Dairen and sent emissaries to Chefoo in an endeavor to persuade Gen. Lieu Chen-Nien to surrender or join the revolt. The advices also stated that about 70,000 men on both sides have been engaged in the battles.

FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS WORTH OF LOST LABOR

A morning newspaper usually costs 5 cents, but a certain edition of a recent issue of a Los Angeles journal is being preserved by officials of the Pathe studio as denting their treasury to the tune of nearly $5,000.

The paper in question was being read by an employee of the studio on the outskirts of the set where scenes for "Strange Cargo," the 100% all-talking picture now at the Earle Theater, was being made under the direction of Benjamin Glazer.

Turning the pages of the newspaper made the customary rustling sound, which went unnoticed by every one until the rushes of the day's work were run for the director and his staff in the studio sound projection room. Then it was found that the noise, slight as it was, had been caught by the extremely sensitive photophone recording system, and provided a distinctively jarring note in a very dramatic dialogue scene between Russell Gleason and Lee Patrick, and it was necessary to retake the entire episode.

The cast of "Strange Cargo" includes a galaxy of former stage players, many of whom are already established as favorites in the silent drama also. Lee Patrick, a Broadway star, was placed under contract for the feminine lead, with June Nash and Josephine Brown in other important parts. Russell Gleason, George Barraud, Otto Matlesen, Kyrle Bellew, Andre Beranger, Claude King and Ned Sparks are the principal masculine players. The scenes of the picture are laid aboard a palatial yacht and are said to be dramatic and thrilling.

"MY MAN" GOES ONE MORE WEEK AT THE METRO

Fannie Brice is one of those persons that utterly defy description. One may resort to a debauch of adjectives in the attempt, yet the elusive lady is still but faintly imagined. Fannie Brice must be seen to be appreciated—seen and heard, and that is precisely what the record crowd at the Metropolitan Theater last week did. They saw, heard, and, to judge by their uproarious applause, appreciated.

Vitaphone seemed even to add to the magnetism of her personality, to the devastating quality of her mirth, to the appeal of her moments of pathos, and to the half-mournful cadences of her voice. In her ludicrous travesty of the "Spring Song," the clowning antics of "I'm An Indian," she seemed the very incarnation of the muse of merriment. And more than a hint of the tragic genius of Bernhardt shone through her poignant rendition of "My Man."

It was all there! It was the same old Fannie that the world has laughed and cried over—but with a new enchantment!

Fannie is cast as the oldest of three orphans and the supporter of the family. By what odd means she meets, helps, and wins a proposal of marriage from a young demonstrator; how her sister, insolent and a follower of a middle-aged roue, steals from Fannie the love of her man—how her old gift for entertaining the fellow workers in the shop with song and dance oddities, wins her a chance to go on the stage—and how she finally attains the heights, through suffering—make a story of moving beauty and dramatic power.

Busy Days.

Wade Boteler, well-known character actor, is finding this a busy film world, for he had no sooner brought his make-up case home from First National, where he did an Irish portrayal in "Dark Streets," than he was called to M-G-M for an officer's role in "The Gobs."

LOIS MORAN HAS COQUETTE ROLE IN "BLINDFOLD"

Admirers of winsome Lois Moran, who saw her play a slightly sophisticated role in "Sharp Shooters," will have an opportunity to see her go the limit as a pampered little coquette who has become the dupe of a gang of high class jewelry thieves.

She comes to the Fox Theater today in the Fox production, "Blindfold." In this picture she is a plain little news writer in the beginning of the story. Later she suffers a terrific mental shock and becomes the victim of amnesia.

Crooks take advantage of her mental condition and make her think she is one of them. They dress her in expensive gowns and jewels, rent a swanky apartment for her and use her to lure trays of expensive jewelry to her abode.

How she does step, in all her gorgeous array, while in that condition! It undoubtedly is Miss Moran's best role to date, not excepting even her part in "Stella Dallas."

Others in the cast of this Charles Francis Coe story are George O'Brien, Earle Foxe, Fritz Feld, Andy Clyde, Maria Alba, Don Terry, Craufurd Kent, Robert Homans and John Kelly.

THE LITTLE TO REOPEN TODAY WITH WAR FILM

In tune with good-will tours and hidden gestures for international amity comes the first presentation of the Little Theater movement in this city with the production of "Behind the German Lines," scheduled to open today.

This is the first opportunity for the German nation to tell its own story of what actually happened. A story full of action, depicting the lives of men who dared not "question why." Never before has their side been considered by any other country.

Though they have not been able to make many see their side 100 cameramen of the UFA company were assigned by the imperial German government to "cover it." Over one fourth of these men were killed in action—but their cameras carried on and today the film is ready to tell their story.

One of the most picturesque figures in the entire story is that of the now famous "Red Knight" known then as Baron von Richthofen.

EPIC OF GOLD RUSH ANOTHER WEEK ON F ST.

The epic of the North, the gold rush to the Klondike, as written by Robert W Service and as produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is the feature picture attraction at Loew's Columbia this week. The picture boasts of an all-star cast, which includes Dolores Del Rio, Ralph Forbes, Karl Dane, Harry Carey, Tenen Holtz, George Cooper and a host of others.

Thousands of people are seen in a single scene which has miles of background. It is one of the most spectacular pictures ever produced and is likened by many to "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Big Parade." A love story is woven into the gigantic spectacle. It concerns a beautiful young woman who gives her love to a man who has come to Alaska, as did her family, to find gold. A notorious gambler sees the girl and makes advances to her which she, of course, does not encourage. A fight between the boy and the gambler ends with the gambler's clothing catching fire. As he runs in terror he sets fire to the city. The girl realizes that the boy loves her, and they are shown facing the future together as the city is consumed by flames.

VAN STERNBERG MAKES UNUSUAL CAMERA DRAMA

Josef Von Sternberg, famous director of "Underworld," "The Last Command" and other big pictures, directed the latest Paramount hit in which Esther Ralston is featured at Loew's Palace this week. The picture is "The Case of Lena Smith." James Hall and other well known players appear with Miss Ralston.

The story concerns a girl's fight for her child. In the picture Miss Ralston plays a dual role, a mother of forty and a young girl. The picture opens showing her son march off to war. The scene then changes to her girlhood when she leaves the farm to go to gay Vienna. There she falls in love with an Austrian army officer. The picture shows her strivings, her sufferings, and her sacrifices to keep the child she has borne him.

On the stage Wesley Eddy and the Palace Syncopators are aboard ship on a trip to the South Pole in the Gamby-Hale unit, "Cooling Off." In this production are presented Pickard and Pal, Pal being an unusually well trained seal; the Wallace Sisters, two charming dancers and singers, and the Gamby-Hale Girls.

The Fox Movietone News, the M-G-M News, Harry Borjes and the Palace Orchestra, Charles Gaige at the organ and short subjects round out the program.

REPARATIONS BODY REJECTS NEW PLAN

Subcommittee Again Seeking Program to Satisfy Full Committee.

THREE OPPOSING SCHACHT

Paris, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The subcommittee of five of the Reparations Commission was tonight back at its task of trying to find a method of procedure that would satisfy the full committee. The program presented this morning, suggesting the possibility of substituting transfer of money and kind in place of present annuity payments by Germany in the way of reparations, was not accepted.

Various experts on the full committee made suggestions for modification of the plan, and these became so numerous that the whole thing was referred back to the subcommittee with an understanding that it would report again on Monday morning.

There was a distinct feeling manifested that unless this fresh attempt to frame procedure was successful the work of the commission probably would be prolonged beyond the five weeks that were originally agreed upon as the term necessary for solution of the whole problem.

Question of Transfers.

The question is narrowing down more and more to a decision as to the possibility of substituting transfers for annuity payments. The experts themselves carefully avoid connecting the two terms, but the general public is beginning to see their relation and to expect that the ultimate decision of the committee on transfers will show what will be recommended to the various governments as possible annual payments by Germany.

French opinion has been fairly patient throughout the maneuvering for position which followed the preliminary statements before the committee. Certain sections of the press are urging that final action should be on a "50-50" basis, with Germany giving something in exchange for what the allies may cede. In other quarters it is remarked that this equitable exchange is exactly what the experts are trying to arrange.

The subcommittee is working on the idea that Germany might abandon certain guarantees concerning transfers under the original Dawes plan, while the allies in turn would give up the provision in that plan for increased annuities in case of enhanced prosperity in Germany.

Differences Balk Committees.

The embarrassment of the subcommittee arises from the differences between the demands of the creditors of Germany and the willingness of Germany to pay. Since this "second Dawes committee" is in no sense a political body, and is therefore obliged to approach the whole question from an exclusively technical standpoint it must dodge these conflicting claims and try to arrive at an absolutely impartial result.

One of the hurdles in the path of this course is the fact that at least three of the creditor countries (probably France, Belgium and Italy) have thus far not been willing to accept the contention offered by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht that Germany is not in a prosperous situation. These objecting delegations prefer to stand on the situation shown by the last annual report of S. Parker Gilbert, agent-general for reparations under the Dawes plan. This report painted the German economic situation as decidedly encouraging.

Politics in Germany Imperil Trotzky Pass

Berlin, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Domestic political entanglements have dimmed the chances of Leon Trotzky for a passport visa that would permit him to enter Germany. Those who have been favoring the cause of the exiled bolshevist leader fear now that opposition to this project might endanger the formation of a coalition that would insure a safe majority in the reichstag for the government. They therefore have grown lukewarm in their support of Trotzky's request.

It was generally believed that the former commander of the red army in Russia would not be welcomed to this country until after the domestic political situation has cleared itself. Messages in his name continue to come from Pera, the Constantinople suburb in which the Soviet consulate is situated.

Border Patrolmen Shoot Man Blocking Rum Chase

Detroit, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Two customs border patrol inspectors were injured this afternoon, by rum runners, who forced their car into a ditch after the inspectors had shot a man who prevented them from overtaking a truck loaded with liquor.

Leonard Fortney, 33, and H. F. Baker, 28, attempted to halt the truck, and Duke Frampton, 27, of Wyandotte, drove his car into their path. They fired at the car, a shot striking Frampton in the back. The customs men continued the chase, but three cars encircled them and finally drove them into a ditch, causing their car to overturn. They were taken to the Wyandotte General Hospital, where it was learned their injuries were not serious. Frampton was in a critical condition at the same hospital.

Schumann-Heink to Retire From Stage at Season End

World-Famous Contralto to Devote Remaining Years to Teaching.

New York, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—While New York music critics were proclaiming her still one of the greatest contraltos of all time, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink told the Associated Press today that she will bring to a close at the end of this season her career of more than half a century on the operatic and concert stages.

Her voice ringing with happiness over the magnificent ovation she received yesterday, when she sang once again the role of Erda, "Mother Earth," in "Das Rheingold," at the Metropolitan Opera House, Mme. Schumann-Heink announced that she would devote the rest of her years to teaching.

"I shall sing sometimes—yes," she said, "but only for my soldier boys. My voice belongs to them as long as there is anything left of it at all."

In Her Sixty-eighth Year.

There have been rumors for several years that Mme. Schumann-Heink was about to retire. Quite natural rumors since Mme. Schumann-Heink is now in her 68th year, but no statement heretofore has come so directly from Mme. Schumann-Heink herself, and she said today that this announcement, now that she has made it, does not presage a succession of "farewell tours."

"It is time," she said slowly, "I begin to feel my age. I do not want the day to come when some one should say, 'Schumann-Heink should not have sung again.'"

Perhaps never in all the triumphant years of her career did Mme. Schumann-Heink receive a more satisfying reception than that which audience, critics and her associates in the company accorded her yesterday.

Some Moved to Tears.

Far beyond the age at which an opera singer's voice usually is silenced, Ernestine Schumann-Heink dared to walk out on to the stage of the Metropolitan and sing a role that had helped to make her famous in her prime. And the audience had called her back again and again. There were tears in the eyes of some of her associates and the critics hailed her as the "Erda of Erdas" and "the greatest of Wagnerian contraltos."

Mme. Schumann-Heink was as

pleased as though she were a beginner and this her first triumph. It is perhaps this grand simplicity, this kind of youthfulness in her, that has contributed almost as much as her art and her generosity to make her one of the best loved women in the world today.

In the apartment where she lives alone, cooking—and with keen delight—many of her own meals on an electric grill, she had all the papers spread out before her. She was clipping the reviews. She said she would keep them all.

Studies History of Music.

After reading these reviews, however, "this Erda of Erdas" turned resolutely back to her study of history of music, with which she is preparing herself to return next summer to Kansas City, where all through the hottest part of last summer she lectured three times a week to a class of 200 pupils, and next autumn, she says, she will return to New York and enter on this postscript to her notable career.

Don't ever think, though, that Mme. Schumann-Heink regards it as a postscript.

"Do you suppose I shall make a good teacher?" she asked.

ONCE NOTED ACTOR'S WIFE TAKES POISON

Mrs. Jean McIntosh Wrote Two Notes, Police Claim; Taken to Hospital.

LACK OF MONEY BLAMED

New York, Feb. 22 (N. Y. W. N. S.).—Mrs. Jean McIntosh, 40 years old, wife of Burr McIntosh, well known a decade ago as an actor, lecturer, magazine publisher and photographer, was taken to the City Hospital, Welfare Island, today, suffering from what physicians described as an "overdose of veronal." It was stated tonight she would recover.

Mrs. McIntosh had been occupying a walkup studio apartment at 12 East Sixty-first street, living alone. Her husband for some months has been staying in Hollywood. She was found in a semi-conscious condition when her maid came to the apartment around noon.

Police of the East Sixty-seventh street station were notified and Dr. George E. Maurer was summoned. After rendering first aid, the physician succeeded in obtaining a statement from Mrs. McIntosh, who told of feeling ill the night before and taking a five-grain tablet of veronal.

Two notes found in the apartment, according to the police, one addressed to Fanny Richards, the maid requesting her to take care of her employer's Scotch terrier, Jock, and the other asking that her husband and Attorney Joseph G. Deane, of this city, be notified.

McIntosh, interviewed at the Plaza Hotel in Hollywood, asserted that he could only attribute his wife taking the veronal to financial disappointments. He was emphatic in his assertion that there was no family discord or separation, and that since coming to Hollywood he had not been able to do as well financially as he had hoped and that his wife and he have been disappointed in this regard.

Attorney Deane expressed surprise when informed of Mrs McIntosh's condition. He said he had formerly acted as her counselor, but had not seen her in several years.

The McIntoshes were married here on Christmas night, 1914. She was a widow, Mrs. Jean Snowden Luther, of Saratoga. McIntosh was in the original "Trilby," which was produced nearly 35 years ago.

COLD WAVE BROKEN IN CENTRAL EUROPE

Flood Danger New Threat to Greece and Turkey as Thaw Melts Snow.

ICE JAMS ARE BLASTED

London, Feb. 22 (United Press).—The European cold wave was broken in many points tonight, with indications that the weather would abate throughout the continent.

The greater part of central and northeastern Europe is facing the task of digging out of the great snow drifts which have piled many feet deep in some places in the last two weeks.

Feverish preparations have been made to combat floods which are expected to follow the general thaw, such as caused some loss of life and damage in Greece and lower Europe early this week when weather abated slightly before a renewed cold wave descended from Siberia.

The flood danger still is greatest in Greece, Macedonia and Turkey, although extensive preparations have been made to prevent rivers overflowing in Germany and Austria.

Unofficial estimates tonight placed the death toll in the present cold wave as high as 20,000 persons, including deaths from influenza, with thousands of animals dead and millions of dollars damage reported to ships and other property.

Ice has been blasted at a number of points in German rivers as the cold lessened throughout central Europe. A new tempest halted navigation on the Black Sea last night and some snow blocked railways in Thrace, but the thaw apparently was setting in generally.

It was estimated that the flood had damaged 50 per cent of the cultivated land in Macedonia and Thrace, with 1,500 head of sheep and 300 horses drowned.

Honduran Post Candidate Rejected.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Feb. 22 (A. P.).—The Honduran Congress today rejected the appointment of Miguel Paz Paredes as secretary of the Honduran Legation in Washington. Appointment of Ricardo Alduvin as Honduran Minister to Mexico was approved.

$2,000,000,000 Bank Union Is Planned

National Commerce and Guaranty Trust to Consider Merger Details.

New York, Feb. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Directors of the Guaranty Trust Co. and of the National Bank of Commerce within the next day probably will receive notice of a special meeting to be held Monday to consider a merger of the two institutions into a $2,000,000,000 bank, or the largest in the world. Although it is regarded as probable, in view of the market movements of the two stocks, that the merger will be arranged on a share-for-share basis, officials and directors today refused to admit that such details had been completed.

Previous to the special meeting of directors, a group of lawyers are going over the details of the merger, which will put the biggest trust company in the country with the fifth largest commercial bank in the United States.

Guaranty Trust Co. has approximately 4,000 employes in its two branches here and eight branches abroad. Guaranty Co., the investment subsidiary, has three branches in London and a branch in each of the following cities: Liverpool, Paris, Havre, Brussels and Antwerp.

Miss Booth Is Barred Again From Brother

London, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Evangeline Booth, Salvation Army commander in the United States, apparently must return to America without seeing her brother, the deposed Gen. Bramwell Booth.

An official communique issued tonight said she had renewed her request to be permitted to call upon him, but that this would not be possible at present, as the doctors have forbidden any conversation which would in any way remind the general of the blow he so recently received at the hands of the high council of the army.

Georgian Electrocuted For Policeman's Murder

Milledgeville, Ga., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Griffin Grinstead was electrocuted in the State Prison here today for the murder of Homer Stuckey, a policeman, who was shot when he tried to arrest Grinstead after the latter escaped from prison while serving a sentence for another slaying.

He confessed and also admitted a third killing, for which his son is now serving a 20-year sentence.

Man Loses $40,000 On Fake Race Bet

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—John B. St. Clair, a real estate dealer of Waltham, Mass., has reported to local authorities that he was swindled out of $40,000 by confidence men operating a fake race horse betting system, Sheriff E. E. Boyce revealed today.

He said the men represented themselves as connected with a horse-racing syndicate with headquarters in Baltimore and that they instructed him for several days as to place "sure" bets on the races before permitting him to lay a wager. He said he won considerable money but payment was refused until he could produce evidence to show he could have paid the amount involved, had he lost.

St. Clair said he went to Boston, obtained $40,000, and turned it over to the two men here, who gave him a credit slip and told him to cash it at "headquarters" in Baltimore. Going to Baltimore, St. Clair said he could find no trace of the syndicate. The sheriff's office here was unable to locate the two men and St. Clair has set out in the hope of finding them at Jacksonville or Miami.

Northern Lithuania Feels Grip of Famine

Kovno, Lithuania, Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Famine has caused suffering in several districts of northern Lithuania, especially in Joinschkis and Birschi.

Cold and the crop failures of Qowi have brought business life in cities of that area virtually to a standstill.

WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1929. 13

PAULINO WINS DESPITE CHRISTNER'S LATE RALLY

Nats to Leave For Tampa Today

Johnson Takes Active Charge for First Time in Majors.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WASHINGTON'S 1929 baseball season officially opens this afternoon when Manager Walter Johnson heads a small contingent for Tampa spring training camp. Twelve players—young pitchers and catchers—are scheduled to show up at the Smoker City tomorrow and to start their conditioning work bright and early Monday morning.

The delegation leaving here this afternoon is a small one, but its size will gradually increase as the Nationals' train approaches its ultimate destination. Those who start from the Capital City in addition to Johnson, Assistant Secretary Billy Smith and Assistant Trainer F. Reilly Baxter, are Pitchers Irving Hadley, Paul McCullough and Paul Hopkins, and Coaches Nick Altrock and Al Schacht. "Uncle Nick" Altrock lives here, the others coming through on their way from their homes—Hadley from Lynn, Mass.; McCullough from New Castle, Pa.; Hopkins from Chester, Conn., and Schacht from New York.

Several Players to Join Contingent While En Route South.

Pitcher Lloyd Brown already is at Tampa, "rarin'" to go, with the following due either to join the Washington contingent en route or to proceed direct from their homes: Catchers "Muddy" Ruel, who lives at St. Louis; Al Bool, hailing rom Lincoln, Nebr., and Cliff Bolton, from High Point, N. C., and Pitchers Bob Burke, from Joliet, Ill.; Archie Campbell, from Los Angeles, Calif.; Guy Cantrell, from Wilburton, Okla.; Adolph Liska, from Dwight, Nebr., and Jim Weaver, from Bowling Green, Ky.

There will be no baseball played during the first week, as Manager Johnson will turn the squad over to the tender mercies of Trainer Mike Martin with instructions that he "harden 'em up."

Johnson to Ban Catchers' Mitts To Save Players' Arms.

Track work and exercises will be the routine for the first few days, with a little catching thrown in for good measure. In order that none of the youngsters are tempted to cut loose before their arms are ready, Johnson has orders that catcher's mitts be left in the locker room and only finger gloves be used.

Keeping the rookies from trying to show their stuff too soon at the expense of sore arms and long setbacks in their training progress is the hardest job big league managers have to face in the early days of conditioning work, and Johnson believes that the banning of the big mitts will help hold the youngsters in check.

If the National special leaving today arrives at Tampa on scheduled time the athletes will reach their base in time for supper tomorrow night.

G. W. Basketers Cancel Game With St. Francis

Owing to the fact that its opponent—St. Francis, of Loretto, Pa.—has not taken the trouble to reply to Coach Crum's negotiations, the George Washington University Basket Ball Team will have no game to play tonight. If the Pennsylvania outfit shows up, which is unexpected, it will find the H street gymnasium dark and cold.

George Washington's next game will be with Catholic U. on Tuesday night on the former's court.

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—John J. McGraw will ease his ample bulk into a comfortable saddle on an iron horse bound for Texas tomorrow and serenely fold his hands and wait until his steed snorts into San Antonio. Mr. Pickwick never sat down more placidly to a Christmas dinner than the Giants' boss will park himself in the serene seclusion of his drawing room. For once in his life the spark-plug of the Giant machine is looking at life through rose-colored glasses magnified.

Every last player is safe in the fold, and there will be no collect telegrams from recalcitrant players waiting at San Antonio with their irritating and expensive double negatived explanations of why they seek more money than he thinks they are worth. Two of the most capable baseball men in the length and breadth of the land, Ray Schalk and Bert Niehoff, are relieving him of most of his training-camp burdens. The new recruits will be pretty thoroughly catalogued for him when he reaches camp, and about all he will have to do will be to look them over for a final judgment.

McGraw Not Only Tells His Men What to Do, But Shows Them.

But that is not all he will do, by a long shot. The chances are that he won't stand still long enough after reaching San Antonio to give a single mosquito a chance to park in the inviting red reaches of his neck. The chances are that he will have the Schalks and the Niehoffs, as well as the greenest rookies, standing by agape while he demonstrates the proper way to hit behind a runner, take a lead off first, slide into second or throw a batted ball from shortfield to first without going through any setting-up exercises before letting it go.

Pitchers who have been working at their trade for years will find McGraw plucking off their weaknesses for camp inspection like a monkey plucking fleas off a cage mate. A busy little cup of tea, this man McGraw. Even while he's lolling in apparent idleness on the way to San Antonio he'll be working behind his eyebrows every minute.

Pilot Sees "Giant Year" But Makes No Predictions.

McGraw knows too much about the uncertainties of baseball to make any pennant predictions, but it is as obvi-

Helen Hicks Defeats Virginia Van Wie, 2 and 1

Miss Hicks' victory, bringing her second title within ten days, was the greatest upset of the winter season, the veteran tournament player, Miss Van Wie, having been favored.

About ten days ago, Miss Hicks won the Miami women's tournament, accomplishing the feat on her eighteenth birthday.

C. U. Swimmers Hosts To Hopkins Team Tonight

Capt. "Moon" Mullen, a two-time winner in every meet in which he has taken part this season, will lead his Catholic University swimming mates into action tonight against the Johns Hopkins natators in the Brookland pool. The first event will get under way at 8 o'clock.

Despite Mullen's notable achievements, the Cardinal tank team has not triumphed to date this winter, although in each of its three previous meets the margin of the victor was not wide.

Tonight's meet will be next to the last one for the Brookland "fish," the final being due next Saturday, when Duke University's team will journey up from Durham, N. C.

Wide Menaced By New Finn Sensation

Purje, Conqueror of Nurmi, in Two-Mile Race Tonight

Williams Withdraws From Sprint in Titular Meet.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Although Paavo Nurmi has sidestepped a meeting with Edvin Wide, and both Percy Williams and Jack Elder have withdrawn from the sprints, the national indoor A. A. U. track championships at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night will not be without their grudge battle.

Running against Wide, the Swedish schoolmaster who holds the world's outdoor 2-mile record, will be a young Finnish newcomer, Eino Purje, world's record holder for 2,000 meters, who says he has been looking forward to this opportunity ever since he began his track career. Victorious over Nurmi in Finland at 1,500 meters, Purje declares he repeatedly sought opportunity to race Wide and prove his right to a rating above both of the famous international stars, but was unable to inveigle the Swede into an encounter.

Young Finn Confident Despite Wide's Pet Distance.

Purje will be running Wide's distance tomorrow night, his own record having been established over a route little longer than a mile, but the young Finn is confident 2 miles will not prove too far for him. This supremely assured invader, who has something of the naively outspoken self-esteem of a Sharkey or a Christner, says he has done 9:05 in Finland on a poor track and is certain not only that he will beat Wide tomorrow night but that eventually he will lower even Nurmi's great indoor 2-mile record of 8:58 1-5.

Wide, who is here on a combined honeymoon and inspection tour of American schools, with running as only a side issue, has let Purje do all the talking, but is obviously in good condition and ready to give any man in the world a real race at the distance.

It now appears that the rival Scandinavians will have the running pretty much to themselves, as Leo Lermond, of the Boston A. A., believed to be America's best two-miler, and the present holder of the title, has withdrawn from the race, giving a bad cold as his reason.

9 of 14 Championships to Be Defended by 1928 Winners.

The remaining titles probably will stay in America, although it had been

Harvey, British Boxer, Plans Invasion of U. S.

London, Feb. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Len Harvey, Devonshire middleweight, who defeated Frank Moody, holder of the Lonsdale light-heavyweight belt, at Crystal Palace last night, is shortly going to the United States in search of fights, his manager, Dan Sullivan, announced here this afternoon.

Harvey will seek a match with Mickey Walker, world's middleweight champion, there within the next two months. Sullivan declared, "we will cross the Atlantic and surely Great Britain has never had a better chance of regaining lost honors than she has through Harvey."

Harris and Northfoss 3-Cushion Cue Winners

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Dr. A. J. Harris, of Chicago, today defeated E. G. Wainwright, of Pittsburgh, 50 to 30, in the Western amateur three-cushion billiard tournament here.

The match went 86 innings. Harris tied the tournament high run record of eight in the twenty-third inning. The best Wainwright could do was a run of four.

Earl Agniel, St. Louis, Missouri State champion, lost his first match in five starts. He was defeated by E. G. Wainwright, of Pittsburgh, 50-33, in 67 innings. Wainwright had a high run of 7 in the twenty-fourth inning.

Upset Marks Contests In Squash Tournament

New York, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—A surprising upset of Stanley G. Mortimer, of New York, who shares with Clarence C. Pell the distinction of being the only local player who has won the national amateur racquets championship in fifteen years, marked the third round of the title event today. Mortimer went down in a hard fought match before H. D. Sheldon, of New York, by scores of 2—15, 9—15, 15—12, 17—14, 15—12.

Pell, the defeating champion, reached the semifinal round with a straight set victory over Alan L. Corey, of New York. The scores were 15—6, 15—7, 15—11.

Charles J. Coulter, of Tuxedo, and Stanley W. Pearson, of Philadelphia, staged another close battle with Coulter coming out ahead after trailing two sets to one. The scores were 15—8, 12—15, 7—15, 15—10, 15—7. In the fourth match Hewitt Morgan, of New York, defeated W. Palmer Dixon, of New York, 15—2, 15—2, 15—11.

Stribling Says Sharkey's Chin Will Be Target Wednesday

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Going to work like a night watchman, Young Stribling, the lean Georgian, emerged from retirement when the sun went down today and took a "tune-up" drill. As far as the principals in the big heavyweight duel of the South next Wednesday night were concerned, he worked alone.

Jack Sharkey, the Boston belter, found the sun too hot for boxing, but just right for golf. After a late breakfast and swim Jack trudged over eighteen holes in the heat and retired to cooler places. With the pounds dropping away so swiftly under the hot sun, he weighs less than at any other time in his fighting career. Sharkey plans to nurse carefully every ounce of the 187½ pounds he has left until the night of the skirmish in Flamingo Park.

The quiet, handsome young Southerner is slightly disturbed over the frequency with which the left hooks he practices on the bodies of sparring partners have been dropping low. He paused after road work this morning to explain that he has lost but one match in 251 by that means during his career.

Stribling Says Punches Would Not Be Called Fouls in Bout.

"Those punches would never be called fouls in a fight," he said. "The size of the gloves I use deceives the eyes. The glove sinks into the body just above the beltline, but the gloves are so wide that at least 2 inches of the leather seems to strike below the line. There'll be no foul on my part next Wednesday night."

Stribling has a simple formula for success in the biggest test of his career. "There's only one way to fight Sharkey," he said. I'm just going to hit him on the chin as often and as hard as I can until he falls down. I might not knock him out, but if I keep hitting him I'll win just the same."

The Macon youngster, who hasn't a mark to show about the body and head for the 251 fights he has crammed into his 24 years, worked eight rounds in leisurely fashion.

He boxed two rounds each with Paul Cavalier and Marty Burke, but made little effort to do more than loosen his muscles, keep his judgment of distance in tune and get the benefit of moderate exercise. He punched the bags and did calisthenics for four more rounds. For several days Stribling has appeared to little advantage in his drills.

Fully dressed he weighed but 189 pounds, and, like Sharkey, is afraid that the heat will push him beyond the line of staleness. Against Cavalier he flashed a sharp right hand, but failed to press the issue at any time.

With Sharkey resting, other members of his training staff moved upon the Stribling workout in a body. They returned to Sharkey with the unanimous report that the Southerner was not likely to cause much trouble Wednesday night.

Young Andy Callahan, the left-hander lightweight from Lawrence, Mass., whose specialty in the workouts consists of cuffing the heavyweight sparring partners Sharkey leaves over, announced for all to hear that he was ready to whip Stribling himself. Callahan was matched with Baby Stribling, brother of "W. L.," but the younger member of the fighting family injured his hand in training.

Australians to Invite U. S. Track Athletes

Wellington, New Zealand, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The New Zealand Amateur Athletic Association decided today to bring to New Zealand next season a team of track athletes from either Canada or South Africa. If this can not be brought about the United States will be approached.

Taylor Injures Wrist; Shea Fight Canceled

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Bud Taylor, the Terre Haute, Ind., "terror," injured his right wrist so severely today that he has been forced to cancel his bout with Eddie Shea. They were to have battled ten rounds here next Tuesday night.

Giants Curtail Drill Because of Cold Wave

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—An unexpected cold wave again forced acting Manager Ray Schalk to curtail the practice of the Giants here today. The drop in temperature precluded any batting or pitching drills. Schalk took the youngsters to the sliding pit and put them through a sliding session, and raced the main body of the squad around Bear Field for six laps.

Mickey Walker Earns Decision Over Willis

Recreation Park, San Francisco, Calif., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Mickey Walker, hard-punching middleweight champion, hammered out a popular decision over Jack Willis, game slugger from San Antonio, Tex., in a nontitle ten-round fight at the San Francisco baseball park here today.

Some 15,000, coaxed out to see the pair in a second nontitle mill, were treated to a clash slowed up during the middle sessions, and then finished rally that had the crowd cheering.

In the sizzling tenth round Walker battered the blonde Texan around the ring and had him reeling from terrific lefts and rights to both face and body. Willis was a true gamester and plugged back toe to toe, but his efforts were ineffectual. The Associated Press score chart gave Walker eight rounds and Willis one. The fifth was fairly even.

Course Record for John As Farrells Win Match

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Johnny Farrell, national open champion, equalled the course record here this afternoon to defeat, almost single handed, the team of Tommy Armour and Gene Sarazen in their annual best ball match with Farrell and his brother, Jimmy. The Farrells won, 2 and 1.

Johnny Farrell's medal score was 67, a mark set last year by Armour in the same annual match when he and Sarazen won from the Farrells. The best score the invaders could chalk up was, Sarazen's 71, while Armour slipped to a 76.

Up to the seventeenth hole, Farrell led the parade with as dazzling an exhibition of golf as has been seen this year over the local course. Going out he was four under par with 32. A trap shot on the third clung to the lip when it seemed almost impossible for it not to fall. On the seventeenth, where Sarazen, Armour and Johnny all had fours, the junior member of the Farrell firm, Jimmy, sunk a long third for the lone helping hole and the match.

Special to the Washington Post.

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 22.—E. H. Batson, of Washington, was one of 90 "tin whistle" golfers who competed in the twenty-fifth anniversary tournament of the organization here today, a flag contest.

Batson, playing in class B, got as far as two shots on the nineteenth hole, where he planted his flag.

4 D. C. College Teams On Alien Floors Tonight

Four local college fives will be in action tonight, but none on a home court.

Maryland will conclude its regular schedule in a clash with its old rival, Johns Hopkins, at Carlins Hall in Baltimore. Georgetown will collide with the powerful Temple U. Quintet in Philadelphia, while Catholic U. will run up against the formidable City College of New York Team in New York City. Gallaudet will engage St. Mary's Celtics in Alexandria.

Evers to Teach Braves The Fine Art of Sliding

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Radical innovations in spring training methods of the Boston Braves are being gradually introduced by Acting Manager Johnnie Evers. The sliding pit, which the Giants first used at Marlin Springs years ago, will be an important feature of this year's workout, while as much attention is to be paid in the future to the players' leg muscles as has always been devoted to pitching and throwing arms.

In giving a short talk over the radio this noon, Judge Fuchs made it clear that the actual playing direction of the team this season would be left to Evers and Hank Gowdy. Barring Joe Dugan, who is not expected to report to the Braves this season, there are no holdouts on the Boston team. Percy Jones and Bruce Cunningham, both pitchers, who have been at odds with the management on the salary question, wired today they were on their way to camp.

Maj. Segrave to Test His Speedboat Today

Daytona Beach Fla., Feb. 22 (United Press).—Miss England, the speed boat in which Maj H. O. D. Segrave expects to shatter the world record now held by Gar Wood, was christened and launched here today, but a scheduled trial run was postponed until tomorrow due to an oil leak.

The British speed ace expects to test out his big 12-cylinder craft tomorrow, after a thorough inspection to locate the defect which developed today after a special channel had been dug to assure clearance to deep water in the middle of the Halifax River.

Repeated attempts were made today to proceed with the test, but each time it was found necessary to shut off the motor. The craft was christened by Mrs. Segrave.

N. Y. U. Boxers Win 4 Bouts From G. U.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH
(Sports Editor of The Post).

THE young men of the Georgetown Boxing Team pursuing an education at the Hilltop last night received a liberal initiation into the fine points of boxing by the exponents of pugilism of New York University, who contrived to win four of the six bouts fought, while the lesson was in progress. The score was 4 to 3 in favor of New York U. after the latter had forfeited the 115-pound class bout as a result of an injury to Marmon, the Violet's bantamweight.

Fighting in an atmosphere that smacked more of the drawing room than the resined canvas, with dress clothes spotting the stands in Ryan Gymnasium, the boxers entertained the 1,200 fans with a pleasing exhibition of milling that provided in earnest endeavor what it lacked in polish.

Until Sargisson, the New York U. heavyweight, climbed into the ring with Weldon Monson, Georgetown football star, who had volunteered his services in the absence of the regular heavyweight, not a knockout had marked the program. One followed quickly. Monson, with the gloves on the first time in collegiate competition, stalled off Sargisson for the first minute and then the man, who is looked upon as the successor to Al Lassman, brought the Georgetown heavyweight to the realization that the bout was soon to end. A straight left sent Monson back into his own corner and after a right followed Monson's seconds saw the light and tossed in the towel at the moment that Referee Heine Miller was about to stop the fight of his own accord.

Georgetown went into four of the six bouts at a marked physical disadvantage with the tall, rangy New Yorkers. The hope of the Georgetown Team, Charley Fish, emerged with a decision over Gold, and Pozzo took the verdict from Sirotis in the only two bouts won by the Hilltoppers.

Fish encountered difficulty in solving the defense of the short, squat Gold, New York 145-pounder, who reveled in the infighting and shot a volley of stiff punches to Fish's midsection, but the Georgetown welterweight sent Gold's head back with straight lefts, aided by his advantage in reach. An extra round might have brought a more decisive verdict.

Except for the earnestness with which they fought, the Pozzo-Sirotis battle might have been regarded as a clown act, with the New York U. 175-pounder standing all of a half foot over 6 feet

High Strung to Compete For Gerry as 3-Year-Old

New York, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—High Strung, which raced as a 2-year-old last season under the colors of Marshall Field, will run as a 3-year-old in the colors of Robert L. Gerry. But High Strung, leading money winner among the juveniles last season, has not been sold or transferred. He was bred and owned in partnership by both sportsmen and under an agreement by which he would run on the name of one as a 2-year-old and of the other as a 3-year-old.

Yale Again Trounces Princeton Five, 29-19

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Yale's basketball team scored a decisive victory over Princeton by a 29 to 19 score in the annual alumni day game today. It was Yale's second victory of the season over Princeton and gave the Elis a tie for second place in the Eastern Intercollege League. Yale has won four games and lost four this season.

Dartmouth is tied for second place with three victories and three defeats. The defeat pushed the Tigers farther down into the league cellar. They have won only one of six games. Yale led at the half, 12 to 8.

Wilson Signs With Cubs After Brief Consultation

Chicago, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Hack Wilson, coholder of the National League home run championship, today signed his contract with the Chicago Cubs to complete the club's 1929 roster. Hack, who had not returned his contract mailed to him several weeks ago, put in his appearance at the club office today and after a few minutes' consultation with President W. L. Veeck put his name on the dotted line. Wilson will leave with the remainder of the squad for the Cubs' training camp on Catalina Island tomorrow.

WINS DECISION

20,000 Cheer Loser's Final Stand; Bout Slow Affair.

Akron Fighter Takes Jabbing in Early Rounds of Fray.

By HERBERT W. BARKER
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Meyer "K. O." Christner, the one-time Akron rubber worker, pitted the dynamite in his right hand against the untiring rushing tactics of Paulino Uzcudun, Spanish woodchopper, in Madison Square Garden tonight and lost. Paulino carried off the decision in clean-cut fashion after ten rounds of rough and tumble fighting.

Starting off as though he would polish off the Basque in short order, Christner saw Paulino take all he had to offer and come back for more. After that the 33-year-old Akron slugger, subjected to terrific body punishment, tired badly and the durable Paulino galloped away with the decision with comparative ease.

Christner's Final Round Rally All But Knocks Out Uzcudun.

But Christner never was anything but dangerous. Even so rugged a fighter as Paulino found that the Ohioan's right lived up to everything that had been written about it.

After taking a severe trouncing for seven rounds Christner amazed the capacity crowd of close to 20,000 spectators in the tenth round by tearing in and whaling Paulino with rights and lefts that threatened to drop the Basque for the first time in his career. Reeling about the ring like a drunken man, Paulino vainly sought to come to close quarters, where all his effective work is done.

Christner cagily kept away and dropped his right again and again on the Spaniard's jaw; but the woodchopper refused to go down so easily as do the trees he used to cut. The final bell was a welcome sound for Paulino, but even this last-ditch rally by Christner could not affect the final result.

Paulino, from the third to the last round, had dealt out such terrific punishment to Christner's midsection that there was no doubt as to the winner unless the rubber man from Akron could land a finishing punch. He never has been knocked from his feet, but he did some peculiar things standing up on certain occasions tonight.

At the outset Paulino, wading in as usual, went back on his heels from the effects of a terrific punch on the chin. All through the round Christner evaded the Spaniard's rushes with ease and beat such a steady drumfire of right hands on Paulino's chin as to force the Spaniard to hang on grimly. During the first two sessions Paulino did not land an effective blow. He was too busy protecting himself after Christner had connected with that right. The Ohioan apparently forgot he had a left hand. At least he used it so seldom that it was practically worthless to him.

Basque Punishes Opponent Badly; Wins 6 Rounds.

After that the tide of battle turned. Apparently arm-weary, Christner began to miss as Paulino, head down, bored in and swung both hands to his rival's body. The Basque at last seemed to have solved the double question of how to get close enough to inflict some punishment while avoiding that right hand at the same time.

From the third round to the ninth, Christner was on the receiving end of some effective body punishing that at times had him holding on in despair. Finding this game to be what seemed necessary, Paulino never let up, punching to the face scarcely more than a score of times. Christner landed his right often enough to keep Paulino wary and cautious, but the Ohioan was outscored by a wide margin none the less.

The Associated Press score card gave Christner three rounds—the first, second and tenth—with Paulino taking all the others except the ninth, which was even. Paulino weighed 196; Christner, 195.

Nurmi's 2-Mile Mark Shattered by Wide

Boston, Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Edwin Wide, Swedish middle distance star, broke the New England indoor record for the 2-mile run and bettered Paavo Nurmi's time in the recent K. of C. meet by seven seconds to win the event at the Boston Caledonian games tonight.

Wide took the lead after the first half mile and held it throughout. He finished half a lap ahead of Gus Moore, of the Brooklyn Harriers, in 9 minutes 5 4-5 seconds. Ove Anderson, of Finland, was third. With competition, Wide probably would have set a new world's record. He was not pressed and finished fresh. His time for the first mile was 4 minutes 30 seconds and for the mile and a half 6 minutes 49 seconds.

Percy Williams Wins "Century" in Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Percy Williams, Canadian Olympic sprint champion, ran the 100-yard dash in 10 1-5 seconds tonight to win the event in the indoor meet of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. Frank Vogel, of Buffalo, was second and Bud Couhig, of Canisius College, was third.

Miss Ethel Catherwood, of Canada, world's and Olympic running high jump record holder for women, equaled the world's indoor record of 4 feet 10½ inches in an exhibition.

Lew Elder, Toronto, member of the Canadian Olympic team, defeated Iggy Gronkowski, Buffalo, in an unlimited bicycle pursuit race over a distance of 3 miles. The time was 7:12 2-5.

Bucs Start Training At Paso Robles Today

Paso Robles, Calif., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Of the fifteen pitchers whom Manager Donie Bush, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, piloted into town this afternoon, five are new to this camp.

Homer Blankenship was with Dallas in the Texas League and Leon Chagnon with Lynn in the New England circuit. Ralph Erickson twirled for Boise in the Utah-Idaho League, while Steve Swetonic, with Indianapolis in the American Association, distinguished himself by winning three games in the little world series, in which that club played Rochester, pennant winner of the International. Jess Petty, the veteran left-handed star, was obtained from Brooklyn in exchange for Glenn Wright.

Henry Meine, coming from Kansas City, in the American Association, and Larry French, from the Pacific Coast Portland Club, are holdouts. French is expected tomorrow and it is believed an adjustment will be reached with him. Meine is slated to be traded. They are both pitchers. The first practice is scheduled for tomorrow.

Sonnenberg Is Winner In Springfield Match

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Gus Sonnenberg, world's champion wrestler, defeated Jack Smith, of Pesthigo, Wis., in two straight falls here last night. Sonnenberg won the first in 28 minutes 30 seconds with a flying tackle, Smith being knocked out when his head hit the floor. Sonnenberg took the second in 8 minutes 55 seconds with a toe hold.

FLEETING FIRE WINS HOLIDAY HANDICAP AT MIAMI

Start Is Good For Field of Seven

Pigeon Wing II, Best Horse, Shuffled Back, and Is Fourth.

Lightfoot Don, 12 to 1, Beats 2-Year-Olds in Opener.

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, MIAMI, FLA., Feb. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Fleeting Fire wo. the Washington's birthday claiming handicap for 3-year-olds and upward at five and one-half furlongs which featured this afternoon's card. Fleeting fire opened at 4 to 5 and went to 9 to 5 and then led all the way to win by a length and half from Apostle, with Golden Volt third as far back.

Seven went to the post and the start was good, but Fleeting Fire would have had trouble in beating Pigeon Wing II, the best-backed horse in the race, had that one, after breaking well, not been shuffled to next to last in the run through the back stretch. Pigeon Wing closed fast in the run around the stretch turn but just missed being third. Apostle was closest to Fleeting Fire all the way and held the others safely.

Former Gov. Al Smith and Mrs. Smith paid a second visit to the Miami Jockey Club track this afternoon. Smith spent most of the afternoon in the official senclosure. In the club house with his party, were included Mr. and Mrs. William F. Kenney, H. Bayard Swope and Tim Mara.

Lightfoot Don Shows Way to Two-Year-Olds in Opener.

Lightfoot Don, a son of Donnacona, which was backed at 12 to 1, won the opening event for 2-year-olds at three furlongs, by a nose from Bud Fisher's Bob Shannon, with G. W. Lofts' Doncru third. The last named was sore going to the post and would have won had he not run out at the stretch turn. The start was a poor one and only the placed horses had much of a chance.

Odds on favorites favored their backers but gave them considerable thrills before they got down in front. J. A. Weil was under pressure to beat reputation in the claiming event at six furlongs, while in the Martha Washington purse, the secondary feature of the program, Bonaire was all out to beat Gadalong a length At that Bonaire was poorly ridden by Jockey Brown.

RIALTOS LOSE THRILLER.

Rialto All Stars lost a heart-breaker to the Trinity Five, 23 to 20, in the latter's gymnasium. The teams were nip and tuck all the way, with Shirley's basket and foul toss in the waning minutes giving the Trinitys the margin. The Rialtos were impressive in defeat and had Lester Singman and Sklar as their star performers. At half time the two teams were tied, 10 to 10.

CATHOLIC U. QUINTET BEATEN BY VILLANOVA, 39-22

Cardinals Use All Players On Squad

Walsh Only Visitor to Penetrate Wildcat Defense.

C. U. Is Held Scoreless From Floor for 11 Minutes.

Special to The Washington Post.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 22.—Catholic University's court machine was handed a rude jolt by Villanova College's fast quintet here this afternoon, the Cardinals being snowed under to the tune of 39 to 22. It was their second defeat of the season at the hands of the Wildcats.

The Washington passers were away off in their shooting. For the first eleven minutes of play they were held without a field goal. Walsh was the only Catholic U player who managed to toss in a twin pointer during the opening period. The Cardinals attempted a number of shots, but all of them went wild.

At half time, Villanova, conquerors of Loyola yesterday, enjoyed a 19-to-4 lead. Jack Birmingham, ace forward of the Wildcats, bombarded the Catholic U basket for five double-deckers in the first period. He was withdrawn in the second half in order to save his strength for the Canisius game tomorrow. Three of Birmingham's shots were from the center of the court.

Villanova Scores Virtually At Will on Cardinals.

Catholic University's lineup was switched on a number of occasions, every player on the Washington squad being given an opportunity to show his stuff, but Villanova was not to be denied this afternoon and the Wildcats scored almost as they pleased against the various Cardinal combinations.

Walsh was the only Cardinal who found the basket to any advantage. He tallied three times from the field, one of his shots being from past the center of the floor. Reilly, his running mate at forward, was the only other C. U. player to score more than one field goal. He made a pair of twin pointers.

Postoffice Sets Two Marks; Davidson Stars

Tom Davidson, lanky star of the Postoffice, in the Bethesda Bowling League, led his team to two league records last night in a match against the Edgemoor team. Postoffice won three games, setting a new mark, with a game of 612 and a set of 1,698. Davidson contributed games of 115, 142 and 117 for a set of 374, the second highest of the season in the Bethesda League. Burris had a 364 set.

In doubles, Clem Weidman and Howard Campbell start the final five games of their match with Ray Von Dreele and George Lang 35 pins to the good.

Odenthal, Temporary Chairman, Calls on All Clubs and Schools to Help District Gain Right to Conduct Own Athletics.

ALL bona fide amateur clubs or groups of athletes contemplating organizing as such were urged last night by H. J. Odenthal, executive secretary of the City Club, to investigate immediately the merits of the current movement to secure an independent association of the Amateur Athletic Union for the District of Columbia.

As temporary chairman of the group of club representatives who met at The Post Thursday night and moved to secede from the South Atlantic Association of the A. A. U., at the same time voting to petition A. A. U. national headquarters for an independent association charter, Mr. Odenthal sounded an appeal to every amateur club and school in Washington to voice its sentiment in the matter.

Mr. Odenthal stated as his confirmed belief that every amateur organization in Washington desires to see local athletics controlled by local authority. The large turnout of club representatives and their action at the meeting Thursday night offered convincing testimony of the feeling, he said.

Official Action on Petition to Be Taken as Soon as Possible.

Calling attention to the fact that he now has in his hands the draft of the petition and the resolution for the formation of the District of Columbia Association which were passed on at the meeting, the City Club executive extended an invitation to all amateur clubs here to take an active part in the movement.

Any club representative may inspect the petition and resolution at Mr. Odenthal's office at the City Club any day between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. The petition soon will be circulated among all organizations for signatures and as many as care to sign may do so.

Official action on the petition will be taken as soon as possible by the clubs represented at the "independence" meeting. Some of the clubs will call special executive sessions for consideration of the matter in order that the forwarding of the petition to A. A. U. headquarters may be expedited.

A favorable sign of success in the movement for a Washington Chapter of the A. A. U., Odenthal pointed out, was the spontaneous support in its behalf voiced by Ernest J. Spitzer, A. A. U. commissioner for the District.

Washington Seen as Logical Center For District A. A. U. Association.

Although an official of the South Atlantic Association, representing that body's registration committee, Spitzer declared Thursday night that an independent association undoubtedly would stimulate interest in amateur athletics here.

An aroused interest in local athletics would enable Washington to perform the patriotic duty it faces of contributing strength to the United States Olympic teams, Spitzer stated, adding that American athletic supremacy can not endure unless all communities, as well as Washington, continually supply strength for the national teams.

Supplementing the recent statement by Daniel J. Ferris, national A. A. U secretary, that Washington is a logical center for a distinct association, Odenthal last night asserted that Washington, as the Nation's Capital, should be the American sports center, just as Paris, Berlin and other European capitals are the sports centers of their respective countries.

NURMI RUNS FOUR-MILE RACE

Finn Meets Star Field at Legion's Games Wednesday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—Paavo Nurmi decided today to undertake a 4-mile race, the longest he has ever run in this country, at the New York County American Legion games here Wednesday night.

Ove Anderson, also of Finland; Frank Titterton, national 15-mile champion, and Irving Totten, Millrose A. A. runner, are expected to make up the field against him, but most of Nurmi's efforts will be concentrated upon an attempt to break the world's record of 19:27 4-5, made by Willie Ritola January 20, 1923, on the same 102d Engineers' Armory track.

One reason Nurmi chose the distance was because he is always glad to try for any record held by the New York Finn, with whom he has never been on friendly terms.

Waning of Sprinting Powers Brings Nurmi Into Longer Contests.

Another is that with the waning of his sprinting powers, as shown by his recent defeat by Ray Conger at 1 mile, the seven times Olympic champion is falling back upon the longer distances. He has said that when satisfied his days as a middle-distance star have passed he will turn his attention to such tests of endurance as the marathon and the one-hour race. The legion officials had offered him a chance to try the hour run against the record Wednesday, but the Finn chose the 4 miles.

Most of Nurmi's races in his present tour have been around 2 miles, while when he was here in 1925 shorter distances constituted the bulk of his schedule. The longest race he ever ran in this country was a 3-mile jog at Los Angeles, April 25, 1925, in which he defeated eight Sherman Indians.

GOLF AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

Answered By
Former Women's Western Champion.

Mental attitude means everything to the golfer in the matter of hazards, putts and even drives; in fact, a wrong mental attitude probably goes farther toward destroying one's game than any other factor. Anticipation of a shot may tighten the muscles and as a consequence offer a mental hazard which must be overcome. Determination, confidence and a spirit of "never give up" will be found to be enormously helpful in assisting a golfer to correct a wrong mental attitude.

D. C. DE MOLAY QUINTET TO FINALS

Defeats York Five in Overtime Contest, 26 to 25.

THE Washington representatives advanced to the finals as a result of an exciting 26-25 extra period victory over York, Pa., in yesterday's round of the basketball tournament at Eastern High School, featuring the current pilgrimage of De Molay members to the Capital.

The Washington-York clash was productive of many pulse-beating moments for the large audience. The score at the close of the regulation 40 minutes was 22 to 22, Washington having rallied in the second half to come up from a disadvantage of 9 to 16.

He rallied in the third round, but failed to wipe out Pinsky's huge lead.

The third round brought Cleveland the decision over Hagerty, Georgetown 125 pounder. Until then the two were unable to score effectively, but in the final session Cleveland launched an attack to Hagerty's body and was greeted with the fact that Hagerty didn't relish this sort of work. Cleveland slowed up the Georgetown fighter perceptibly in the third round and won the decision.

Going into his fight with Gelbaum with a bruised eye, Tierney, Georgetown 160 pounder, was a target for the punches of the tall New York man. Tierney forced the fighting from the start, scoring heavily to the body, but Gelbaum's long arms picked off his leads and the New Yorker administered a thorough beating to the Georgetown man on the ropes, where most of the battle was fought. Both were tired young men at the end.

American U. Beaten By Duquesne

Eagles Rally at End But Succumb by 25 to 23 Score.

Special to The Washington Post.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 22.—American University lost its second close game in as many nights to Duquesne University, 25 to 23. Trailing at half-time, 15 to 4, the Eagles staged a rally which swept the Dukes off their feet. One more minute of play might have told a different story, as the Eagles succeeded in getting their stride only late in the third quarter. The removal of Lichliter on personal fouls was a blow to the Eagles, but they fought to within two points of the winners.

Stevens and Benedict were the big guns for the Dukes and they netted 18 points between them. The game started slowly, and the Dukes ran up 15 points before the Eagles scored appreciably. Side court shots accounted for most of the Duke points, as the Eagles' tight defense had their famous block play completely stopped.

Reilly Stops Schaffer In "He-Night" Match

One knockout materialized on the boxing card of the "He-Night" program of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department at its eighth annual smoker last night at Rockville. K. O. Reilly lived up to his name by disposing of Red Schaffer. Sailor Oden earned a decision over Jack Stone, while Ray Bowen won on points over Young Firpo. The other three bouts resulted in draws. They were Douglas-Swetman, Harris-Hogan and Cafone-Raymond.

Joe Turner won the wrestling match, scoring a fall over Gardini.

HAS ANOTHER PROSPECT.

Brooklyn high school baseball, which produced Waite Hoyt, has offered another pitching prospect. He is Jimmy Pattison, a southpaw, and the Brooklyn Robins will give him a trial this spring. He pitched his school team to a city championship two years ago and last year made a reputation in semipro ball.

ous as the decoy quarter on a hat-checker's platter that he thinks this is going to be a Giant year. He has a young team, and John McGraw is sweet on youth. He expects that, barring accidents, young players like Lindstrom, Hogan and Hubbell will be better this year than they were last season. While declining to predict where the Giants will finish, he does not hesitate to say that he considers that the 1929 edition of the team will be better in every way than his 1928 entry. And when it is considered that the Cards had to stick out their tongues to finish in front of the Giants last fall, it is not unreasonable to infer that McGraw is entertaining visions of another pennant at the Polo Grounds.

A. A. U. Officials Should See That Advertised Track Stars Compete.

The practice of A. A. U. officials of permitting the public to be misled into believing that certain stars will compete in meets when as a matter of fact these stars have never entered, smacks dangerously of ticket-selling under false pretenses. Half a dozen stars billed to appear in the New York A. C. games last Monday night failed to appear, and it developed that some of them at least never officially had entered the meet.

If an athlete does not turn in a signed entry blank all the advertising in creation does not commit him to appear and the only loser is that great old glutton for punishment of this kind, A. Sapp Public. Still sore from the treatment he received Monday night, old A. Sapp Public went right out and bought tickets for the National Championships in the Garden tomorrow night, partly on the strength of assurances that he would see a return engagement between Percy Williams, Olympic champion, and Jack Elder, the Notre Dame sprinter who gave the Canadian his first defeat Monday night.

Neither Williams Nor Elder Are Entered in Tonight's Games.

Now it appears that neither Williams nor Elder ever entered and will not compete tomorrow night. A. A. U. officials explain that they never stated definitely that either had signed an entry blank. They did not know until today, they declared, that Williams had decided to wind up his indoor season at Buffalo tonight and that Elder had been refused permission by the Notre Dame authorities to make another trip to New York at this time. But if they are not directly responsible for misleading announcements about the appearances of Williams and Elder, they accepted the benefits of such advertising without taking any steps whatever to find out if either would run.

The number of unexplained scratches on last Monday night's official program of the New York A. C. games suggested that all that it is necessary to do to make indoor athletics a profitable and safe racket is to hire a hall, print a lot of tickets and programs and let the public believe sure-fire attractions are booked whether or not the attractions have entered or have intention of doing so.

Entries 10 Days in Advance Would Give Public a Fair Deal.

A rule requiring that the signed entries of competitors be filed a week or ten days before a meet is the answer to the situation, if the A. A. U. is honestly looking for one.

Shooting Irons of Sheriffs May Pierce Miami Stillness

Sharkey-Stribling Bout Promises Little Excitement But Gay Hunting Parties of Deputies May Compensate Chicago Element There.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

MANY customers of various social grades are rolling down to Miami at this time to attend the battle of the two young model husbands, Willie Stribling and Jack (Rin-Tin-Tin-Ear) Sharkey. Advices in the papers state that a representative group of Chicago's undesirable citizens are on the beach even now having selected Miami as a sort of rest sector, where they may recuperate from the winter campaign along the front at home. It is understood that the boys plan to do no more professional work than will be necessary to keep their hands in and this seems a very sensible way for them to do.

The policemen and deputy sheriffs of Miami are notoriously petulant and jealous of their perogatives to do all the shooting there. They seem to have been given an exclusive franchise to do the shooting under some old Spanish land grant. At any rate, the privilege of shooting people resides exclusively with them, and they are very resentful of any invasion of their rights. They may figure that if outsiders were to carry on promiscuous shooting the time would come when there would not be anybody for them to shoot.

Fine Lot of Prisoners Bagged By Deputies on Hunt.

The deputy sheriffs had a fine shoot one night a few years ago during the boom. It was almost as picturesque and successful as the one held in the beer truck garage in Chicago a short time ago. It was learned that some of the prisoners in the county jail were dissatisfied with the radio program and planned to withdraw quietly under cover of the night and go to some other State. The deputies heard about it and organized a shoot. The hunt supper was served to a gay party of deputies and as the hour of the shoot arrived they took positions commanding the rear exit of the jail.

Then, promptly at the appointed time, the prisoners dashed out and the deputies banged away at them, obtaining a wonderful bag. Some of the huntsmen seem to have wavered slightly as the desperadoes, under sentence for such atrocious crimes as nonsupport, petty larceny and vagrancy, dashed across the yard, for not all of the quarry was killed.

Score May Be Compared With Chicago Machine-Gun Team.

The leading citizens took a strange attitude in the circumstances. They appeared to feel humiliated by the poor score and did not wish the incident to be overemphasized in the press of other States. However, considering the range, the night visibility and the fact that they were shooting at moving targets, there was nothing to be ashamed of. The gallant officers did almost as well as the Chicago machine-gun team which worked at close range, in a good light, and with the subjects stationary against a wall.

But the boom fell away and the population dwindled abruptly as the law officers were so hard put for victims. In the meantime thousands of realtors had migrated from the State, having been protected during the boom by a legal technicality which defined the shooting of a realtor as a felony. I believe this freak statute has been revised since then and the realtor classed as a varmint and a nuisance to the community. It must grieve the law officers now to think of the fine, fat realtors who swarmed over the subdivisions, as brash as ducks in a bird sanctuary, in those days.

Tunney Preserved His Well Being By Failure to Argue Point.

Gene Tunney had an adventure with the law in Miami. He was not champion at the time and one afternoon he was challenged for some offense, such as parking his car in the wrong place. Some said he was singled out because he was a Catholic. Others thought the officer simply did not like him. Gene Tunney, which seems plausible. At any rate Mr. Tunney outstrategied the officer for he refused to argue, probably for the first and only time in his life.

He happened to know that under the law he could not be legally shot unless he said, "Do you know who I am?" or "The mayor is a personal friend of mine." This comes under the head of resisting an officer in Miami and justifies stern measures. Mr. Tunney's acquiesence probably was the means of preserving him to uplift the City of Chicago.

On the whole, in view of the irritable character of the officers there and their tendency to shoot in an off-hand manner, Miami seems a great place for a rest sector for the Chicago visitors provided they devote themselves strictly to resting. But if they should forget themselves the Miami officers would be very likely to organize another shoot and solve much of Chicago's present problem.

Exodus to Miami Is Mystery Considering Past Records.

Just why so many people are going to Miami to see the two young home-loving fathers fight one another is a mystery which I would rather not discuss. There is much snow in the North at present and I am content to cover the strange affair without looking a pleasant assignment in the mouth. Still, it seems strange, considering the notorious disinclination of both young husbands to indulge in any serious fighting when they are in the ring. It would be just as exciting to watch a scientist pondering a theory in an armchair but you could not gather a thousand people at the same prices to watch Prof. Einstein think.

DE LUXE FIVE BOYS' CLUB CHAMPS

BASKET BALL, boxing, hockey, gymnastics and various kinds of races were included in the annual indoor athletic carnival at the Boys' Club last night. More than 800 attended the festivities.

The basket ball game was for the unlimited championship of the Boys' Club League and was won by the DeLuxe Quintet after a spirited battle, 22 to 20. The Celtics were the DeLuxe Team's opponents. The game was one of the most closely contested and thrilling of the season, with the DeLuxe Team winning it in the last two minutes of play. The Celtics led 12 to 10 at the half and 20 to 19 up to the last two minutes. A basket and a foul toss by Hook won for the DeLuxe Five.

The hockey game was won by the All-Nations Team over the Americans, 3 to 0. In the races R. Kitchen won in the undressing and dressing race, while A. Pierri was the winner in the potato race.

Bethesda Five Defeats Silver Spring in Thriller

In a hotly-contested basket ball game in the Montgomery County High School League, Bethesda surprised by trouncing Sandy Spring High School in a game that was in doubt until the final whistle by the score of 26 to 25. This gives Bethesda undisputed possession of third place in the league. Neither team held a long lead at any stage of the game, the losers setting the pace in the first half, leading, 10-6, at half time.

A fast second half attack, led by Tyrell and Dellinger, gave the victors their leading margin. In addition, Davis, of the Bethesdans, played an excellent floor game. Cuff starred for the Sandy Springers.

The Children

By Edith Wharton

A sparkling serial story by one of America's foremost novelists at the gleaming heights of her power.

SYNOPSIS.

Martin Boyne, a civil engineer, who has been kept busy on projects in all parts of the world, is taking an ocean trip. He is looking forward to another fortnight of solitude, when the steward places a chair next to his tagged "Mrs. Cliffe Wheater." Cliffe Wheater was a schoolmate of his at Harvard. His wife was a friend of those days. Boyne is puzzled by the varied types of children in the entourage and further mystified by its leader. He is told by the gray-haired woman called "Scopy" her name is Judith. She is the oldest child of the Wheaters. The oldest boy's name is Terry, and his health is poor. "Scopy" recounts the tangled love affairs of the Wheaters to explain the group for Boyne. Boyne begins to mull over his own affairs, particularly with a Mrs. Sellers. Hitherto "unattainable," he recalls her husband has died. Terry, the heir-apparent to the Wheater fortune, asks Boyne to intercede on his behalf with his parents to obtain a tutor. Complying with the Wheaters' request he hires a young Englishman. Boyne leaves the Wheaters and their yacht and retinue at Venice to visit his friend, Mrs. Sellers, at her chalet in the mountains. Boyne discusses plans for his wedding to Mrs. Sellers, but she refuses to set a date.

The children fearing another break between their parents imminent flee to the mountains for Boyne's advice.

"ALL of us; with Scopy and Nanny. I always said we'd have to, some day. Scopy and Terry and I managed it. We're at the Pension Rosengluh, down the hill. Father and mother will never guess we're here. They think we've gone to America on the Cunarder that touched at Venice yesterday. I left a letter to say we had. Terry was splendid; he invented it all. We hired motors at Padua to come here. But I'm afraid he's dreadfully done up. This air will put him right, though, won't it?" She poured it all out in the same tone of eager but impartial narrative, as if no one statement in her tale were more surprising or important than the others—except, of course, the matter of Terry's health. "The air here is something wonderful, Martin, isn't it?" she pleaded; and he found himself answering with conviction: "There's simply nothing like it."

Her face instantly grew less agitated "I knew I was right to come," she sighed in a tired voice; and he felt as if she were, indeed, an overwrought child, and the next moment might fall asleep on his shoulder.

"Judy, you're dreadfully done up yourself, and you look famished. It's after 10. Have you had anything to eat since you got here?"

"I don't believe I have. There wasn't time. I had to see the children settled first, and then make sure you were here."

"Of course, I'm here. But before we do any more talking you've got to be fed."

"Well, it would be nice to have a bite," she confessed, recovering her usual confident tone.

"Wait here, and I'll go and forage." Boyne walked down the corridor and back into the hall, where people were beginning to group themselves about the bridge tables. The fact of finding himself there roused him to the recollection of having left Mrs. Sellars alone with his empty coffee cup. Till that moment he had forgotten her existence. He made his way back to their corner, but it was deserted. In the so-called "salon," against a background of sham tapestries and gilt wall lights, other parties were forming about more bridge tables; but there also there was no sign of Mrs. Sellars.

"Oh, well, she's got bored and gone home," he thought, a little irritably. Surely it would have been simpler and more friendly to wait * * * but that was just a part of her ceremoniousness. Probably she had thought it more tactful to disappear. Damn tact! That was all he had to say. * * * The important thing now was to give Judy something to eat, and get her back to her pension. After that he would run up to the chalet and explain.

He found a waiter, learned that it was too late to resuscitate dinner, and ordered ham sandwiches and cocktails to be brought at once to the writing room. On the whole, he found it simplified things to have Mrs. Sellars out of the way. Perhaps there was something to be said for tact after all.

The first sip of her cocktail brought the glow back to Judith's eyes and lips, the next made her preternaturally vivid and alert. She must eat, he told her—eat at once, before she began to talk; and he pushed his own sandwiches on to her plate and watched her devouring them, and emptying first her glass and then his. She sparkled at him across its brim, but kept silence, obediently; then she asked for a cigarette, and leaned back at ease against the cushions.

"Not Chip?" he questioned, incredulous.

"Chip? I should think so! Do you suppose I'd have stirred an inch without Chip?"

"But what the deuce is it all about, child? Have you gone crazy, all of you?"

"Father and mother have. They do, you know. I warned father we'd run away if it happened again."

"What happened?"

"Why, what I told you would. But I don't suppose you ever got my letter? I was sure you'd have answered it if you had." She turned her eyes on him with a look of such unshaken trust that he stammered uncomfortably: "Tell me all about it now."

"Well, everything went to smash. I knew it would. And then all the old shouting began—about detectives, and lawyers, and mother's alimony. You know that's what the children mean when they talk about mother's old friend Sally Money. They've heard about her ever since they can remember. They think mother sends for her whenever anything goes wrong. * * *"

"Worse than ever. They were dividing us up already. Bun and Beechy back to Buondelmonte, because he's married a rich American. And Zinnia is ready to take Zinnie. Lord Wrench thinks she's so awfully funny. And father would have had Chip, of course, and we three older ones would have begun to be sent back and forth again as we used to be, like the shabby old books Scopy used to get out of the lending library at Biarritz. You could keep the stupid ones as long as you liked, but the jolly ones only a week." She turned her burning face to his. "Now, Martin, didn't I have to get them all away from it?"

The food and wine had sent such a flame through her that he began to wonder if she had fever, or if it were only the glow of fatigue. He took her hand and it was burning, like her face.

"Child, you're too tired. All the rest will keep till tomorrow. Put on your hat now, and I'll take you down the hill to your pension."

"But, Martin, you'll promise and swear to see us through?"

"Through everything, bless you. On Scopy's book. And now come along, or you'll fall asleep in your tracks."

In reality he had never seen her so acutely wakeful; but she submitted in silence to being bundled into her hat and coat, and linked her arm confidingly in his as they threaded their way among the bridge players and out into the great emptiness of the night. The moon hung low above the western peaks, and the village clock below them in the valley chimed out the three-quarters after 11 as they walked down the road between blanched fields and sleeping houses. On the edge of the village a few lights still twinkled; but the Pension Rosengluh, demurely withdrawn behind its white palings, showed a shuttered front to the moon. Boyne opened the garden gate and started to go up the doorstep ahead of Judith. "Oh, you needn't ring, Martin. It would wake everybody. I don't believe the door's locked. I told Scopy to see that I wasn't shut out." She tried the doorknob, which yielded hospitably, and then turned and flung her arms about her companion.

"Martin, darling, I don't believe I'd ever have dared if I hadn't known you'd see us through," she declared with a resounding kiss.

"The devil you wouldn't!" he murmured; but he pushed her gently in, thinking: "I ought never to have given her that second cocktail." From the threshold he whispered: "Go upstairs as quietly as you can. I'll be down in the morning to see how you're all getting on." Then he shut the door on her and slipped out of the gate.

Midnight from the village clock! What would his friend say if he knocked up the chalet at that hour? Half way to the hotel he left the road and branched upward through the firewood, by a path he knew. But there were no lights in the chalet.

TRADE LEVEL ABOVE BUSINESS YEAR AGO

BANKERS PLAN BANQUET

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Volume of trade during the week ended February 16 was substantially above the level for the corresponding period a year ago; although a decline was shown from the preceding week, according to check paymen data collected by the Department of Commerce and made public yesterday in its weekly business survey.

Industrial activity, as reflected by operations in steel plants, was greater than during either the previous week or the same period of last year. Employment in Detroit factories, indicating activity in the automobile industry, was greater than in either prior period.

During the latest reported week the output of bituminous coal showed a gain over both the previous week and the same week of 1928. Lumber output showed a gain over the previous week, but declined from a year ago. Gains developed in the output of crude petroleum over both periods. Freight-car loadings, covering the latest week, were above those of the same week last year.

The general index of wholesale prices also experienced a gain over both the preceding week and the corresponding period of last year. Prices for copper averaged higher than in either period. Cotton prices were highe than in either the previous week or the same week of last year. Iron and steel prices, showing no change from the week prior, were higher than a year ago.

As compared with the preceding week, loans and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks showed contraction They were higher than a year ago. Interest rates on both time and call funds were higher than in either the previous week or the same period of last year. Bond prices averaged lower than in either prior period. Prices for stock declined from the preceding week, but were higher than a year ago.

Receipts of cattle and hogs at primary markets during the week ended February 9 were smaller than in the same period of 1928. Wheat receipts, however, showed a gain over a year ago. Business failures covering the latest reported week were smaller than in either the preceding week or the same period of 1928.

Merger Awaits Approval.

The merger of the Baltimore Trust Co. and the National Union Bank of Maryland, which now awaits only the formal approval of stockholders of the two banks, will give Baltimore another financial institution with resources close to $100,000,000. Combined resources of the two banks aggregate $85,000,000, while combined deposits, according to the December 31 financial statements, amount to $65,700,000.

United under the name of the Baltimore Trust Co., the combined institutions will have nineteen offices throughout Baltimore, including the main office of the new 34-story banking and office building which that company is erecting at Baltimore, Light and Redwood streets. Four of the offices will be in the business center of the city.

Under the terms of the merger, which have been accepted by directors of both institutions, stockholders of the National Union will receive one and one-half shares of Baltimore Trust stock for each share of their stock. The enlarged Baltimore Trust Co. will have as chairman of the executive committee Waldo Newcomer, who has been chairman of the board of the Baltimore Trust. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, United State senator-elect, president of the National Union Bank, will succeed Mr. Newcomer as chairman of the board. Donald Symington will continue as president of the institution.

Bankers to Attend Banquet.

Washington's junior bankers have completed plans for the twenty-fifth annual banquet of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, tonight at the Willard Hotel, and the stage is set for the most elaborate event of its kind in the history of the organization.

Active members of the institute, local alumni prominent bank executives and guests from other cities will swell the number seated around the festive board to a figure in excess of the 825 which attended last year's function.

Frank M. Totten, national president of the American Institute of Banking, will deliver the principal address. James A. Soper, president of the Washington chapter, will preside. T. Hunton Leith is chairman of the banquet committee; August E. Henze, vice chairman; Rose L. Royce, secretary, and William G. Winstead, treasurer.

"Curb to Guard Peserves."

The Federal Reserve Board has little thought of suppressing the bull securities market permanently, in the opinion of the Washington office of Ernst & Ernst.

"Of course, the object of the current Federal Reserve campaign is not to depress the market, but merely to prevent the misuse of reserve funds in it," the accountants state. "The impression is rather widespread that after a few weeks of hesitation—assuming that the uncertainty created by the Federal Reserve will continue to cause hesitation—the market will resume a normal course. If this proves true, then there is little doubt that it will be regarded as more fundamentally healthy than the market of the recent past. A certain amount of doubt as to whether the market strength comes from 'speculation,' as distinguished from investment, will be eliminated."

Stock Will Be Offered.

A syndicate headed by F. S. Smithers & Co., Charles D. Barney & Co., and Dominick & Dominick, of New York, and Stein Brothers & Boyce, of Baltimore and Washington, will offer Monday 225,000 shares of common stock, without par value, of the Southland Royalty Co. at $24 a share. This company was organized in June, 1924, under the laws of Delaware, to acquire from landowners in this country interest in any minerals, oil and gas under their lands and interests in the royalties from leases made by the land owners to operating oil companies.

Chamber Starts Inquiry.

To ascertain what part trading in futures plays in the economy of business and determine what its function is in the marketing of commodities, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States has designated a special committee of business men to study these operations. Under the chairmanship of William Franklin Gephart, vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, the committee has held its first meeting, laying out a plan of inquiry.

The committee is commissioned to determine the speculative effects of futures trading upon prices, apart from the normal influence of supply and demand, and the methods by which the practice can be made to serve best the purposes for which it was designed as a link in the long distribution chain between producer and consumer.

BILL TO RAISE PAY OF U. S. EMPLOYES LIKELY TO BE LOST

Lehlbach Says Measure's Chances of Being Passed Are Diminished.

BLAME FOR ITS FAILURE PLACED ON OPPONENTS

Misrepresented, He Charges, by Mrs. Worrel, Head of Civil Service League.

The bill to correct the inequalities of the Welch act and distribute nearly $3,000,000 in raises to Federal employes appeared to be lost last night.

Chairman Lehlbach, of the House civil service committee, coauthor of the bill, stated frankly that chances of passage of the measure had been "considerably diminished" by the activities of those opposing it.

House leaders, Lehlbach said, take the position that if criticism of Congress is going to continue even after the bill passes, it would be better that it not pass at all.

Lehlbach declared that if the bill fails to pass—and judging from his attitude, it will fail—persons like Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, president of the League of the American Civil Service, will be responsible.

Misrepresented, He Says.

He charged that Mrs. Worrell and others had distorted and misrepresented the purposes of the bill.

Blame for failure of the bill, Lehlbach said, also would rest on the shoulders of the higher-paid employes who are in danger of having their salaries reduced if the bill becomes a law. These employes, he said, have fought the bill on selfish grounds, not thinking of the low-paid employes it is designed to help.

In the beginning, Lehlbach said, President Coolidge, the Budget Bureau and the House leaders all approved the pending bill, but now, with the agitation against it growing, he said, the situation is different.

Many to Have Pay Reduced.

No matter what happens now, a large number of higher paid employes are bound to have their pay reduced. This is assured by a provision in the pending second deficiency act.

If the Brookhart-Lehlbach bill fails to pass, however, the low-paid employes who were slighted under the Welch act are simply "out of luck." These are the employes who got only $60 and $100 raises under the Welch act when Congress intended that they should get $120 and $200. The pending bill was designed to carry out the intent of Congress.

Criticized Lehlbach Section.

In attacking the Brookhart-Lehlbach bill Mrs. Worrell and her associates have particularly criticized the Lehlbach section dealing with the powers of the Personnel Classification Board and the provision reducing salaries.

Lehlbach produced a petition yesterday which he said Mrs. Worrell circulated in the Government departments, bitterly assailing him and Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

When the second deficiency bill is taken up in the House today, Representative Bachman (Republican), of West Virginia, proposes to make a point of order against the provision ordering salary cuts for those employes who under the McCarl interpretation of the Welch act got more money than Congress intended they should get.

Lehlbach Will Preside.

Representative Lehlbach will be presiding at the time, however, so it is possible that he will not uphold the point of order.

A resolution of the ten Federal employes' unions of the National Federation of Federal Employes in the District, urging immediate passage of the Lehlbach bill was forwarded to members of Congress yesterday, and will be followed by petitions of more than 1,000 employes of the Navy Department protesting against passage of the bill.

Coincidental with the resolution of the ten unions representing 16,000 Federal workers, registering approval of the Lehlbach bill and urging its immediate passage, so they may receive full benefits of the Welch act, as intended by Congress, comes the declaration of sponsors of the petitions of the Navy Department that the Lehlbach measure does not promote a single employe.

Answered by Adherents.

Charges by the latter that pressure was attempted on certain Navy employes to prevent them from signing the petitions is answered by representatives of adherents of the Lehlbach measure that dissatisfaction exists among the Navy workers over the campaign against the bill, and that some who signed the petitions of protest now want their names removed.

Mrs. Worrell stated last night that her organization was doing everything in its power to defeat the bill. She said the organization today would send letters to all members of Congress, setting out the league's reasons for opposing the measure. She added that the league was backing the Navy Department workers who have signed petitions opposing the measure.

WOMEN PATRIOTS, SUMMERALL HOLDS

General Denies Material Age Has Destroyed Idealism, in League Talk.

OTHERS ALSO SPEAKERS

That women are the "greatest patriots" of today was stressed yesterday by Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States Army, in an address he gave before the second celebrity breakfast of the National League of American Pen Women in the Willard.

"There is no greater misconception of the trend of the thought of women," he said, "than that they are drifting away from patriotism." He denied that the material age in which the people are living had destroyed the "spirit of purpose, faith and idealism."

That this is so is being revealed in the writings of the pen women, he said, and are "interpreting for the future the spirit and psychology of the civilization in which they live."

Helen Rowland, a writer, made a humorous plea for more Army officers. The women, she said, need more decorated men who have time to cultivate the arts and become interested in things that interest the feminine gender.

Business men, Miss Rowland said, are necessary and are all right as husbands, but as for lovers they are a "dose of absent treatment." "What the great American business man needs to learn is how to be more decorated," she concluded.

Mrs. Lars Anderson, author of books on travels, and John Ettl, sculptor, also gave talks. Mrs. Anderson giving a sketch of her recent trip to Africa and Mr. Ettl telling of his work in connection with the Arlington Bridge. He said that Washington has some beautiful art and described the Lincoln Memorial as "eloquent."

Others introduced were Representative Florence P. Kahn, of California; Representative Katherine Langley, of Kentucky; Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey; Mrs. F. B. Moran, Edouard Albion, Miss Jessie Dell, Mrs. Edward J. Gann, sister of Vice President-elect Curtis; Miss Mathilde Elker, author of three novels; Mrs. Robert Imbrie, Mrs. Minnigerode Andrews, Miss Mary Temple and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Atwood.

Congresssional Record Comic Strip Proposed

(Associated Press.)

A proposal to modernize the Congressional Record by the publication of comic strips, cartoons, pictures, headlines and editorials was made in the House yesterday by Representative Boylan (Democrat), New York.

Boylan urged adoption of a resolution he had prepared for introduction to provide for the creation of a joint committee to study how the Record might be improved. The improvements, he suggested, might necessitate a recourse to newspaper tactics.

For 56 years, he said, the Congressional Record has been a recital of the speeches of members of Congress. On one occasion, he added, its pages had been brightened by the publication of a picture of a cow and there had been many requests for copies of that particular issue.

MONEY GONE HUNTING JOB

A desire to see his wife and child, from whom he had been separated four months last night, led to the capture of John A. Scruggs, jr., 26-year-old accountant who, police charge, disappeared October 23, along with $738 belonging to Edward P. Schwartz, Inc., for which firm he worked.

Scruggs was taken into custody by Police Detective Sergts. Arthur T Fihelly and Benjamin C. Kuehling as he slept on a davenport in his wife's apartment at 1629 R street northwest. He had arrived shortly before from Philadelphia.

Scruggs, according to the detectives, offered no resistance and was quoted as having admitted the theft and the leaving behind of an insolent note to his employer, in which he defied arrest. The detective also stated that Scruggs told them he had spent the money seeking employment in Pennsylvania and the South. He was charged with grand larceny.

Charles M. Birkhead, a member of the Schwartz firm, who discovered the theft and Scruggs' note, was named as the complainant when the young man was booked at headquarters last night. Scruggs was locked up at the First Precinct Station and will be arraigned in court this morning.

AIR JUNCTION SITE FORMALLY OPENED

IS ON ROAD TO RICHMOND

The George Washington Air Junction on the Washington-Richmond highway, about 2 miles south of Alexandria, was dedicated yesterday by Henry Woodhouse, president of the Aerial League of America, at exercises attended by a large number of residents of Alexandria and Washington.

Among those participating in the dedication were Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart, historian, and member of the United States Commission for the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington; William Tyler Page, clerk of the House of Representatives; Wilson Seldon Washington and Miss Nancy James Washington, descendants of the first President.

The airport was named the "George Washington Air Junction" by Wilson Seldon Washington, whereupon Miss Nancy Washington pressed the switch illuminating the 50-foot arch over the entrance to the field. The airport is established on 2,000 acres of the ancestral homeland of Washington and George Mason.

"Records discovered by Mr. Woodhouse," he said, "show that Washington took a keen interest in the first balloon ascension made on January 9, 1793, which was the first time that a man severed contact with the earth on the Western Hemisphere."

The airport was described by the speaker as a "great aerial, scientific and historic center, supplying to the Capital of the United States, which Washington founded the airport facilities which it needs so much."

Burglar Alarm False; Crowd Watches Police

An unlocked front door at the Saks Fur Co., 810 Twelfth street northwest, which became ajar in an unknown manner, last night set off the electric burglar alarm with which the place is equipped, bringing a score of policemen and headquarters detectives to the scene and attracting a large throng of F street holiday strollers.

Under direction of Detective Sergts. Arthur T. Fihelly and Benjamin C. Kuehling, who arrived within two minutes from the time the alarm sounded, the store was thoroughly searched, but no one was found in the building and nothing was found to be disturbed or missing. It is believed probable that the door was carelessly left unlocked and was opened when some one leaned or brushed against it.

POLICEMAN IS TOLD TO EXPLAIN 'SPITE' ARREST OF WOMAN

Hesse Acts After Judge Hits Demand That Motorist Drive in Deep Snow.

PATROLMAN BIGHAM'S HONKING WAS IN VAIN

Mother, Taking Boy to School, Is Denied Traffic Ticket; Taken to Station.

Patrolman James Bigham, of the Fourteenth Precinct, was ordered to submit a report today to Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, Superintendent of Police, concerning his alleged "spite" arrest of Mrs. Dorothy M. Gibson, of 1910 Thirty-seventh street northwest, on a minor traffic charge.

Mrs. Gibson was brought before Judge Ralph Given in Traffic Court yesterday on a charge of failing to keep as near the right curbing as possible. After hearing testimony, Judge Given dismissed the charge, and branded the arrest as "spite on the part of the officer."

Takin, Son to School.

The arrest was made Thursday on Wisconsin avenue northwest. Mrs. Gibson testified she was taking her son to the Sidwell Friends' School. The heavy snow, she said, forced her to drive in the center of the street in ruts made by other automobiles. She said she heard the horn of an automobile honked a few times, but, fearing if she drove into the heavy snow, her car would be stalled, she kept in the center of the street.

Eventually, she said, the automobile drove up beside her and she was instructed to stop by Patrolman Bigham, who was driving a police car. Mrs. Gibson said she requested the policeman to give her a ticket, when she learned that she was to be arrested, but, instead, she was ordered to drive to the Fourteenth Precinct.

Received Ticket at Station.

Upon learning of the judge's action and rebuke, Maj. Hesse ordered Bigham to prepare a report and submit it today.

'Gurgle' No Ground For RumRaid,Claim

Frank Shore's Counsel, So Says and Commissioner Turnage Will Decide.

A motion to quash liquor charges against Frank Shore, proprietor of a tire shop at 1223 New York avenue northwest, on the ground of illegal search and seizure of three trunkloads of liquor by prohibition agents, was taken under advisement yesterday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

The agents, headed by W. A. Heddens received information that a choice consignment of liquor was being shipped from Miami, Fla., from a "Mr Willoughby" to another "Mr. Willoughby" in care of Shore. The agents examined the trunks at a local express office and said they heard a "suspicious gurgle" when one of three trunks was moved. They followed the express wagon to Shore's establishment and arrested him on January 29.

William E. Leahy, counsel for Shore, contended that the mere hearing of the "gurgle" by the agents was not grounds for a search. He charged that Shore had no knowledge of the trunks' contents and that the agents had no probable cause nor right to make the seizure and arrest.

Following the arguments, Commissioner Turnage declared he would take the matter under advisement to make a study of authorities on search and seizure with a view to determining whether or not a "gurgle" heard in a trunk would constitute justifiable action for a search.

WITNESS TESTIFIES FORGED LIEN IS PUT ON HOME FOR AUTO

"SHARP PRACTICE" HIT AT HEARING YESTERDAY.

Investigation of alleged abuses in realty transactions was resumed by the Gibson subcommittee of the House District committee last night. Memphis Johnson, colored, an employe in the office of William Wolfe Smith, general counsel to the Veterans' Bureau, testified that a second trust had been taken on property owned by him, without his knowledge or consent, as collateral for an automobile purchased by Lenora Thomas, colored.

Chairman Gilbert (Democrat), Alabama, advised Dr. A. Henry, a real estate broker doing business at 1016 I street northwest, that if the mortgage was not released immediately he would give the facts in the case to the District attorney for prosecution. Henry figured in the transaction as collector for the automobile company.

Johnson testified that after paying $3,000 for a house and freeing it of all incumbrance, he was informed that a mortgage amounting to $1,450 was entered against it, signed with his name. He knew nothing about it, he said, Mr. Smith testified that Johnson had been "harassed" by collectors, who interfered with his work repeatedly.

Warned to Cancel Mortgage.

After Dr. Henry had explained his connection with the transaction, Chairman Gilbert asked him if he was not convinced, after hearing Johnson's testimony, that somebody had taken advantage of knowledge that he owned the property in question, and had caused his name to be signed to the mortgage without his knowledge.

Henry insisted that he could not release the mortgage without authority of the company for which he acted, but Gilbert told him that if he was "wise" he would do so at once.

The automobile in question had been obtained from Lenora Thomas, in default of payment, it was brought out. Because the car was damaged, it was said, the mortgage was not released.

Testimony also was heard in a case involving the Workmen of the World, a fraternal insurance company, and the Royal Life Insurance Co., which has been pending in the courts for some time.

Claims "Sharpers" Here.

Attorney Smith, testifying about conditions in the real estate business in Washington, expressed the opinion that the greater number of real estate agents are honest but that there are "sharpers" here, as elsewhere.

He described one "game" entered into by a real estate company and an electrical supply house by which the former sold property on the promise that electricity was available and the supply house trailed along and sold fixtures. Later, purchasers learned that the nearest source of electric power was three or four miles distant. Names of the concerns were not given.

Senators to Hear Protests on Brand

Public Session Is Scheduled Tuesday on Nominee for Utilities Group.

A subcommittee of the Senate District committee will hold a hearing Tuesday on the nomination of Col. Harrison Brand, jr., to serve another term as a member of the local Public Utilities Commission.

Confirmation of Brand is opposed by the Central Labor Union and the Peoples Legislative Service on the ground that, in the merger negotiations, he was more in sympathy with the traction interests than in the welfare of the public.

The subcommittee that will conduct Tuesday's hearing is composed of Senators Jones (Republican), of Washington; Sackett (Republican), of Kentucky, and Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia.
